History of New Zealand, Vol. 2 of 3 (Classic Reprint) G. W. Rusden, 2017-12-23 Excerpt from History of New Zealand Vol 2 of 3 Materials for forming an Opinion of the gravity of the situation were gradually supplied to the English Government The Duke of Newcastle until July 1860 seemed unconscious Parliament slumbered Not since April 1854 had New Zealand papers been presented In July 1860 they were again laid on the table The Duke wrote that he could not hold out any hope that it would be possible to increase permanently the present military force sent out four silver headed sticks to be given by the Governor to chiefs 1 and started on a tour with the Prince of Wales to the United States leaving Sir G Corne wall Lewis and Mr Chichester Fortescue to sign documents until his return The former of the two brought a judgment to bear which the Duke had wanted He saw danger Mro Richmond's celebrated but as he called it able and interesting memorandum shocked him as it had shocked Sir W Denison Her Majesty's Government had very carefully considered the case and were not prepared to meet Mr Richmond's wishes A policy which requires the continual presence of a large force carries in most cases its condemnation on its face About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www

The New Zealand Wars James Cowan, 2015-06-15 Excerpt from The New Zealand Wars: A History of the Maori Campaigns and the Pioneering Period. Oral witness has its historical value, as Mr George Macaulay Trevelyan has explained in his history, Garibaldi and the Thousand. You cannot cross-examine a book or manuscript; that is the weakness of written evidence, which the presence of oral evidence rectifies to some degree. To this it may be added that an historian cannot thoroughly grip the spirit in which wars were waged or appreciate to the full the motives and feelings of the contending forces unless he has had some personal knowledge of the combatants and has mingled with members of the warring parties. The psychology of the struggle will elude the writer who delays his work until the last veteran, the last

pioneer and the last Maori of the old school have gone from among us The foundation for this work of history gathering was laid unconsciously enough in the writer s boyhood on a farthest out farm on the King Country frontier Since those youthful days on the battlefield of Orakau where the shawl kilted tattooed Maoris who had fought in the wars were familiar figures and when the pakeha stalwarts who had carried rifle on many a bush war path garrisoned the blockhouses and redoubts which still studded the Waikato border the task of collecting the tales of old has been an of ten renewed pleasure In the course of writing this History it was necessary to examine a very large amount of material in book form in official documents and in newspaper files It was necessary also to explore battlefields and sites of fortifications throughout the North Island Veterans of the wars European and Maori were sought out sometimes in the most remote places and the field notes made on the scenes of engagements and sieges were often enhanced in value by the presence of soldiers settlers or natives who had fought there and who were able to describe the actions on the spot I take pleasure in recording here the names of those who gave valuable co operation in this work About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
