The central scene depicts a woman in a long, flowing dress, possibly a chiton, standing and holding a small object, perhaps a mirror or a piece of jewelry, towards a man who is seated or kneeling. They are in a classical architectural setting with columns. The vase has a wide mouth and two handles. The painting is in a reddish-brown color on a dark background.

classical playwright and on how our understanding of tragedy has been shaped by our literary past Simon Goldhill sheds new light on Sophocles distinctive brilliance as a dramatist illuminating such aspects of his work as his manipulation of irony his construction of dialogue and his deployment of the actors and the chorus Goldhill also investigates how nineteenth century critics like Hegel Nietzsche and Wagner developed a specific understanding of tragedy one that has shaped our current approach to the genre Finally Goldhill addresses one of the foundational questions of literary criticism how historically self conscious should a reading of Greek tragedy be The result is an invigorating and exciting new interpretation of the most canonical of Western authors

Dramatic Action in Greek Tragedy and Noh Mae J. Smethurst, 2013-02-21 This book explores the ramifications of understanding the similarities and differences between the tragedies of Euripides and Sophocles and realistic Japanese noh First it looks at the relationship of Aristotle's definition of tragedy to the tragedies he favored Next his definition is applied to realistic noh in order to show how they do and do not conform to his definition In the third and fourth chapters the focus moves to those junctures in the dramas that Aristotle considered crucial to a complex plot recognitions and sudden reversals and shows how they are presented in performance Chapter 3 examines the climactic moments of realistic noh and demonstrates that it is at precisely these moments that a third actor becomes involved in the dialogue or that an actor in various ways steps out of character Chapter 4 explores how plays by Euripides and Sophocles deal with critical turns in the plot as Aristotle defined it It is not by an actor stepping out of character but by the playwright's involvement of the third actor in the dialogue The argument of this book reveals a similar symbiosis between plot and performance in both dramatic forms By looking at noh through the lens of Aristotle and two Greek tragedies that he favored the book uncovers first an Aristotelian plot structure in realistic noh and the relationship between the crucial points in the plot and its performance and on the Greek side looking at the tragedies through the lens of noh suggests a hitherto unnoticed relationship between the structure of the tragedies and their performance that is the involvement of the third actor at the climactic moments of the plot This observation helps to account for Aristotle's view that tragedy be limited to three actors
