Writing about Signs/Signifiers

What is semiotics?

Semiotics is the study of signs and symbols and their use of interpretation. Usually, semiotic analysis studies the roles of signs and the part they play on a social and cultural scale.

What is a sign/signifier?

- A sign is the smallest unit of meaning.
- In order to create or define a sign, you will need two pieces:
  - The signifier (any material or physical form of the sign - the object that exists)
  - The signified (a cultural or social concept that a signifier refers to - what it means)

The diagrams above are examples of the "Saussurean" models (named after Ferdinand de Saussure, who helped create the model).

- The tree represents the concept of what we think about when we hear the word "tree." (the signified)
- The sound of the word "tree" - or reading the word in print - brings up the mental image of a tree. (the signifier)
- The two halves of the signifier and signified represent the two sides of the same coin. They are inseparable and cannot exist without each other. The signifier represents the material, physical form of the sign, and the signified represents the cultural or social concept that the signifier refers to.

In summary, the signifier and the signified make up the sign. A sign is a unit of meaning that is composed of two parts: a material, physical form (the signifier) and a cultural or social concept (the signified).

- Semiotics is used to analyze the meaning of signs and symbols in a cultural context.

Writing about signs/signifiers in a research context

- The signifier is the material, physical form of the sign (the signified) and the signified is the cultural or social concept that the signifier refers to.
- The signifier and the signified are inseparable and cannot exist without each other.
