The Roots of Separatism in Palestine

British Economic Policy, 1920-1929

BARBARA J. SMITH

"A first-rate scholarly treatment of a neglected aspect of the history of mandatory Palestine. . . . It is the first study that I know of that, based on archival sources, analyses British economic policies regarding a wide range of economic issues. In addition, the work develops a cogent, fresh, and non-partisan interpretation. No scholar of the Palestine problem, the Yishuv, the Palestinians and Israel can ignore this work."

—Philip Matson, Executive Director,
The Institute for Palestine Studies

A thorough analysis of the economic development of Palestine during the first years of British mandatory rule and, in particular, of the British government's preferential policy regarding Jewish settlement and enterprise sets the tone for this groundbreaking study.

The Zionist settler movement, unable to make much headway under Ottoman rule, was nurtured by, and eventually thrived within, the British Mandate, which was inaugurated in 1920. The British policy of actively encouraging Zionist economic development through preferential treatment also contributed to the economic division of the country along ethnic lines, leading ultimately to the division of Palestine and to the establishment of the state of Israel. Thus the true roots of separatism between the Zionists and the Palestinian Arabs were economic, not political.
