

Being a PaleontOLOGist: Mark Norell

Drawn by the adventure of fossil hunting, Mark Norell became a paleontologist and has gone on expeditions year after year. Find out what it's like to look for and collect fossils in the field, and why Mark enjoys research back in the lab even more.

1. Were you interested in dinosaurs as a kid?

Mark Norell: No, but I was always interested in science. In college and graduate school, I worked a lot with fossils of crocodiles, lizards, that sort of thing. When I came to the Museum, I was studying how DNA influences the way plants and animals develop. At the Museum, it just seemed natural to get

Time: A Bibliographic Guide Samuel L. Macey, 2018-10-10 Originally published in 1991 A multidisciplinary guide in the form of a bibliography of selected time related books and articles divided into 25 existing academic disciplines and about 100 subdisciplines which have a wide application to time studies

Species and Speciation in the Fossil Record Warren D. Allmon, Margaret M. Yacobucci, 2016-10-05 Although the species is one of the fundamental units of biological classification there is remarkably little consensus among biologists about what defines a species even within distinct sub disciplines The literature of paleobiology in particular is littered with qualifiers and cautions about applying the term to the fossil record or equating such species with those recognized among living organisms In Species and Speciation in the Fossil Record experts in the field examine how they conceive of species of fossil animals and consider the implications these different approaches have for thinking about species in the context of macroevolution After outlining views of the Modern Synthesis of evolutionary disciplines and detailing the development within paleobiology of quantitative methods for documenting and analyzing variation within fossil assemblages contributors explore the challenges of recognizing and defining species from fossil specimens and offer potential solutions Addressing both the tempo and mode of speciation over time they show how with careful interpretation and a clear species concept fossil species may be sufficiently robust for meaningful paleobiological analyses Indeed they demonstrate that the species concept if more refined could unearth a wealth of information about the interplay between species origins and extinctions between local and global climate change and greatly deepen our understanding of the evolution of life

Origins Ariel Adrean Roth, 1998 Are the worlds of science and religion irreconcilable Has modern science with its theory of evolution disproved the biblical account of the origin of life If one accepts the biblical account of origins does one then have to reject science Scientist and Christian believer Ariel A Roth argues that taken together science and religion give us a more complete and sensible understanding of the world around us our place in it and our ultimate meaning and fate Roth examines such topics as the evidence for evolution and creation the Flood the strengths and limitations of the scientific method and the reliability of Scripture He concludes that the biblical model of a recent creation by God leaves fewer unanswered questions than either science's evolutionary model or any view between the two positions such as progressive creation or theistic evolution Back cover
