

Social change:

Social change: occurs when whole societies, (not just individuals) change and adopt new attitudes, beliefs or behaviours through minority influence processes e.g when a minority view, challenges a majority view and is eventually accepted as the majority.

EXAMPLES:

- accepting the earth is round not flat; women's suffragette movement; gay rights; environmental issues such as increased recycling; reduced smoking in public places.

Present/Future Social Change:

- Social change occurs when whole societies, (not just individuals) change and adopt new attitudes, beliefs or behaviours through minority influence processes e.g when a minority view, challenges a majority view and is eventually accepted as the majority.
- (WHO) is the minority and (WHO) is the majority, (MINORITY) has to convince (MAJORITY) (VIEWPOINT).
- In the begin (VIEWPOINT OF MAJORITY) and therefore the group norm between (WHO) is to (NORM). This means that (WHO) will be influenced by normative social influence (VIEWPOINT) or risk social rejection from the group which leads to informational social influence, as people want to be right.
- (MINORITY) should use consistency, commitment and flexibility to convince (MAJORITY)(VIEWPOINT).
- (MINORITY) should be successful if (MINORITY) stays consistent and does not deviate from (their/her/his) message that (VIEWPOINT) despite social pressures. (MINORITY) should start by trying to gain support and form a community with people who have the same or a similar belief. This will show (MAJORITY) that this viewpoint is something (MINORITY) truly believes in and has believed in for a long period of time (HOW LONG).
- (MINORITY) should show commitment (augmentation principle) by putting (him/her/themselves) at some risk or inconvenience to show that they were willing to make personal sacrifices to the cause in order to get their message across to others. This will help (MINORITY) to convince (MAJORITY) to listen to the message and draw more attention to the cause. This could be done through a variety of methods such as protests, marches, strikes, lobbying, boycotting and campaigns. (EXAMPLE) this will highlight how (he/she/they) truly believes in (his/her/their) message.
- (MINORITY) should show a degree of flexibility and should be willing to adapt and listen to valid and reasonable counterarguments. Instead, (MINORITY) should compromise by (HOW: LIST THREE) This will make (MAJORITY) listen and take the message seriously and will make (MINORITY) seem less rigid and dogmatic.
- Over time (MAJORITY) will start to internalise this message. This will act as a snowball effect, slowly and gradually gathering momentum and members until there becomes a tipping point and the minority becomes the majority and uses the social pressure of normative social influence.
- This then would have resulted in social crypto amnesia where people are aware change occurred but forget the origins of the original viewpoint, mostly likely because the individual had held negative views of the belief which they have now
