

IN CONGRESS. JULY 4, 1776.

Unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one people to dissolve the political bands which have connected them with another, and to assume among the powers of the earth, separate and equal station to which the laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind requires that they should declare the causes which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness. — That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, — That whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such Principles and organizing its Powers in such form, as shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, in such a case, would dictate that Governments long established should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly all experience hath shewn, that even the most arduous struggle for Liberty may be necessary to bring men to the full sense of their rights and obligations. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same System of Oppression, have connected the People with their Superiors, so that instead of being protected by a Government, they are oppressed by it, and that the same System of Oppression has been carried on by successive Legislatures, till the very rights of the People are violated, and the very Principles of Liberty are destroyed, it is their duty to throw off such Government, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such Principles and organizing its Powers in such form, as shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness.

We the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress assembled, do hereby declare, that the thirteen united States of America, are free and independent States; that they have full Power to do all the Acts and Things which Independent States may of Right do, and to enter into all Treaties, Alliances, and other Measures, which Independent States may of Right enter into, and to send and receive Ambassadors, Consuls, and other public Ministers, and to exercise every other Power which Independent States may of Right exercise.
