Our Europe The Community And National Development:

Our Europe Jacques Delors, Clisthène (Association), 1992 Jacques Delors has soared to prominence as the first transnational political leader of the new Europe Reviled by the British tabloids and lauded by the TUC the President of the European Commission continues to provoke strong reactions across the political spectrum with his astute and relentless drive for European economic and political integration In this new book Delors assisted by the research group Clisthène elaborates the strategy behind the Social Charter and the Delors Plan which has delivered Europe to the brink of the Single European Act At the end of 1992 European economic integration will become a fact and pressures towards political integration particularly in the areas of defence and foreign policy will become irresistible Delors explains that his conception of the Community arose as a response to a menacing international economic conjuncture and outlines the role of an integrated Europe in the new world order He points out that the financial aid made available through EC social programmes to poorer areas already exceeds the total spent by the Americans under the Marshall Plan In a detailed economic survey he predicts that a single open market of 320 million people will benefit member economies by increasing GNP by 4.5 per cent reducing prices by 6 per cent and creating 2 million jobs Drawing extensively on the French experience he shows how regulated integration can maintain Europe's international competitiveness whilst ensuring proper wage levels and working conditions for its population But as Delors reminds us nobody falls in love with a growth rate Our Europe is more than an economic and political programme it is a work of great vision which explores how we might live and act together to transform education work and free time Including an introduction written for this edition Delors first book in English is certain to be as controversial and influential as its author

The United States, the European Union, and the Globalization of World Trade Thomas C. Fischer, 2000-04-30 Professor Fischer presents a comprehensive overview of global trade at the start of a new century from a national, regional and international viewpoint. He looks closely at the four dominant and competing economic systems: the United States, the European Union, Japan and China, and argues that the traditional 'we win you lose' national trade paradigm has been replaced by one that is more collaborative, one that is leaning toward de facto world governance. He compares foreigners' attitudes toward trade and markets with our own using four economic models that typify world trade today. He examines the interface between national, regional and international trading systems and between business and government, then at the prospect of global trade management in different trade sectors under the GATT, WTO and other organizations. The result is a provocative discussion of global trade today. Professor Fischer makes it clear that the United States needs allies. Though its influence in the world trade arena will continue, America's hegemony has ended. The European Union is America's most obvious ally but it has many problems and ambitions of its own. The North American Free Trade Agreement has solidified the North American market but it may isolate and lose South America while Japan, China, Russia and others are left to develop alliances of their own. All these factors raise important global questions among them: Can American capitalism prevail? Should the United States proceed unilaterally as it has so often? Or are regional and multinational arrangements preferable? If there is further globalization as seems inevitable and if American influence is on the wane, what group or organization will lead? To explore these questions and provide the beginnings of answers, Professor Fischer uses his four competing economic systems and handicaps the process country by country, sector by sector with particular attention to transatlantic relations.

The Statesman's Yearbook 2000 B. Turner, 2016-12-28 For the last 136 years The Statesman's Yearbook has been relied upon to provide accurate and comprehensive information on the current political, economic and social status of every country in the world. The appointment of the new editor only the seventh in 136 years brought enhancements to the 1998-99 edition and these are continued in the 2000 edition. Internet usage figures are included. Specially commissioned essays from major political and academic figures supplement country entries in areas of major upheaval and change. A fold out colour section provides a political world map and flags for the 191 countries of the world. The task of monitoring the pattern or flow of world change is never ending. However the annual publication of The Statesman's Yearbook gives all the information needed in one

The European Commission and the Integration of Europe Liesbet Hooghe, 2001 What kind of European Union do top Commission officials want Should the European Union be supranational or intergovernmental Should it promote market liberalism or regulated capitalism Should the Commission be Europe's government or its civil service This 2002 book examines top officials' preferences on these questions through analysis of unique data from 137 interviews Understanding the forces that shape human preferences is the subject of intense debate Hooghe demonstrates that the Commission has difficulty shaping its employees' preferences in the fluid multi-institutional context of the European Union Top officials' preferences are better explained by experiences outside rather than inside the Commission political party country and prior work leave deeper imprints than directorate general or cabinet Preferences are also influenced more by internalized values than by self-interested career calculation Hooghe's findings are surprising and will challenge a number of common assumptions about the workings and motives of the European Commission

Integral Europe Douglas R. Holmes, 2010-07-01 Over the past 15 years the project of advanced European integration has followed a complex secular and cosmopolitan agenda As that agenda has evolved however so have various hard line populist movements with goals diametrically opposed to the ideals of a harmonious European Union Spearheaded by figures such as Jean Marie Le Pen the controversial leader of France's National Front party these radical movements have become increasingly influential and because of their philosophical affinities with fascism and national socialism politically worrisome In Integral Europe anthropologist Douglas Holmes posits that such movements are philosophically rooted in integralism a sensibility that in its most benign form enables people to maintain their ethnic identity and solidarity within the context of an increasingly pluralistic society Taken to irrational extremes by people like Le Pen integralism is being used to inflame people's feelings of alienation and powerlessness the by-products of impersonal transnational fast capitalism The consequences are an invidious politics of exclusion that spawns cultural nationalism racism and social disorder The analysis moves from northern Italy to Strasbourg and Brussels the two venues of the European Parliament and finally to the East End of London This multi-sited ethnography provides critical perspective on integralism as a form of intimate cultural practice and a violent idiom of estrangement It combines a wide-ranging review of modern and historical scholarship with two years of field research that included personal interviews with right-wing activists among them Le Pen and neo Nazis in inner London Fascinating provocative and sobering Integral Europe offers a rare inside look at one of modern Europe's most unsettling political trends
