Other Germanies Karen Jankowsky, Carla Love, 1997-10-16 This book introduces American audiences to Germany through the perspectives of members of various ethnic groups within the newly unified country and through the mediation of feminist scholars documenting the artistic contributions to German cultural identity of ten women writers filmmakers dancers and visual artists The work of these artists is presented in various ways as an opportunity for Germans to explore their own repressed identities as a portrayal of the complex histories of cultural change which foreigners bring into Germany as the work of piecing together a minority identity in Germany as a portrayal of the marginalization of women in the construction of the nation and as the interpenetration of Eastern and Western European cultures These artists subvert the process of forming a singular cultural identity by calling into question the creation of a unified personal identity They represent for example the fragmentation of identity through images of amputation the arbitrary construction of identity through games of chance the struggle within the writing self to resist censorship in East Germany and the protest against a culturally imposed identity based on racial categorization The volume's eleven articles address issues of multiculturalism national and personal identity and avant garde art and reflect on the various ways gender and culture interact in the German context provides the first English language history of the postwar labor migration to West Germany Drawing on government bulletins statements by political leaders parliamentary arguments industry newsletters social welfare studies press coverage and the cultural production of immigrant artists and intellectuals Rita Chin offers an account of West German public debate about guest workers She traces the historical and ideological shifts around the meanings of the labor migration moving from the concept of guest workers as a temporary labor supplement in the 1950s and 1960s to early ideas about multiculturalism by the end of the 1980s She argues that the efforts to come to terms with the permanent residence of guest workers especially Muslim Turks forced a major rethinking of German identity culture and nation What began as a policy initiative to fuel the economic miracle ultimately became a much broader discussion about the parameters of a specifically German brand of multiculturalism Race after Hitler Heide Fehrenbach, 2018-06-05 When American victors entered Germany in the spring of 1945 they came armed not only with a commitment to democracy but also to Jim Crow practices Race after Hitler tells the story of how troubled race relations among American occupation soldiers and black white mixing within Germany unexpectedly shaped German notions of race after 1945 Biracial occupation children became objects of intense scrutiny and politicking by postwar Germans into the 1960s resulting in a shift away from official antisemitism to a focus on color and blackness Beginning with black GIs unexpected feelings of liberation in postfascist Germany Fehrenbach investigates reactions to their relations with white German women and to the few thousand babies born of these unions Drawing on social welfare and other official reports scientific studies and media portrayals from both sides of the Atlantic Fehrenbach reconstructs social policy debates regarding black occupation children such as whether they should be integrated into German society or adopted to African American or other families abroad Ultimately a consciously liberal discourse of race emerged in response to the children among Germans who prided themselves on and were lauded by the black American press for rejecting the hateful practices of National Socialism and the segregationist United States Fehrenbach charts her story against a longer history of German racism extending from nineteenth century colonialism through National Socialism to contemporary debates about multiculturalism An important and provocative work Race after Hitler explores how racial ideologies are altered through transnational contact accompanying war and regime change even and especially in the most intimate areas of sex and reproduction

Writing-between-Worlds Ottmar Ette, 2016-02-22 This book proposes that there is no better no more complex way to access a community a society an era and its cultures than through literature For millennia literature from a wide variety of geocultural areas has gathered knowledge about life about survival and about living together without either falling into discursive or disciplinary specializations or functioning as a regulatory mechanism for cultural knowledge Literature is able to offer its readers knowledge through direct participation in the form of step by step intellectual and affective experiences Through this ability it can reach and affect audiences across great spatial and temporal distances Literature what different times and cultures have been able to understand as such in a broad sense has always been characterized by its transareal and transcultural origins and effects It is the product of many logics and it teaches us to think polylogically rather than monologically Literature is an experiment in living and living in a state of experimentation About the author Ottmar Ette has been Chair of Romance Literature at the University of Potsdam Germany since 1995 He is Honorary Member of the Modern Language Association of America MLA elected in 2014 member of the Berlin Brandenburg Academy of Sciences and Humanities elected in 2013 and regular member of the Academia Europaea since 2010

Body and Narrative in Contemporary Literatures in German Lyn Marven, 2005-05-26 This book examines the relationship between representations of the body and narrative strategies in the work of three contemporary women writers from the former Eastern Bloc countries Herta and Paul Amirson, an ethnic German from Romania Libuše Moníková who emigrated from Czechoslovakia to West Germany and chose to write in German and Kerstin Hensel from the GDR Marven shows how the content and form of their works are interlinked and how these challenge the hegemonic discourses within repressive socialist regimes The introduction contextualizes the writers socially culturally and historically and outlines the theoretical basis of the approach drawing on psychoanalysis performativity theory and feminist critical theory Chapters on the individual authors offer new interpretations of the writers works focusing on the structures of trauma in Amirson's work hysteria in Moníková's and the grotesque in Hensel's The images of the body analysed in the first half of each chapter show the effects of violence challenge the understanding of the body as natural or authentic and raise questions about identity and gender The analysis in the second half of each chapter covers a range of formal features from the fantastic and collage through parody and intertextuality to irony plot and story telling The book also traces developments in the work of all three authors taking account of the historical changes in the Eastern Bloc countries since 1989 Body and Narrative in Contemporary Literatures in German will be valuable for anyone researching contemporary German literatures as well as those interested in feminist theory minority literatures and trauma

Writing Outside the Nation Azade Seyhan, 2012-01-06 Some of the most innovative writers of contemporary literature are writing in diaspora in their second or third language Here Azade Seyhan describes the domain of transnational poetics they inhabit She begins by examining the works of selected bilingual and bicultural writers of the United States including Oscar Hijuelos Maxine Hong Kingston and Eva Hoffman and Germany Libuse Moníková Rafik Schami and E S Zhdanov among others developing a new framework for understanding the relationship between displacement memory and language Considering themes of loss witness translation identity and exclusion Seyhan interprets diasporic literatures as condensed archives of cultural and linguistic memory that give integrity and coherence to pasts ruptured by migration The book next compares works by contemporary Chicana and Turkish German women writers as innovative and sovereign literary voices within the larger national cultures of the United States and Germany Seyhan identifies in American multiculturalism critical clues for analyzing new cultural formations in Europe and maintains that Germany's cultural transformation suggests new ways of reading the American literary mosaic Her approach however extends well beyond these two literatures She creates a critical map of a third geography where a transnational multilingual literary movement is gathering momentum Writing Outside the Nation both contributes to and departs from postcolonial studies in that it focuses specifically on transnational writers working outside of their mother tongue and compares American and German diasporic literatures within a sophisticated conceptual framework It illustrates how literature's symbolic economy can reclaim lost personal and national histories as well as connect disparate and distant cultural traditions
