

Rewriting Gender? (De)constructions of Masculinities between Scientific Discourse and Literary Practice

---

Riccardo Schöfberger (University of Graz)

1. Introduction

Facts were put on the table and promptly challenged when feminist journalist Alice Schwarzer and anti-feminist essayist Esther Vilar met for a TV debate on WDR in February 1975.<sup>1</sup> An exchange of views over the topical issue of whether women in West Germany were actually oppressed by men or vice versa had failed due to the vehement rejection of the opposing arguments and had shown the incompatibility of their respective standpoints right from the start. Subsequently, reference was made to scientific data, in order to seek a fact-based way out of the dilemma. Schwarzer and Vilar tried to let the facts speak for themselves,<sup>2</sup> but it turned out that these facts – as common scientific denominators – allowed for opposing interpretations. Both opponents relied on the same surveys, such as the recently published Die Wirklichkeit der Hausfrau (The Reality of Being a Housewife) by sociologist Helge Pross. However, Vilar interpreted Pross's finding that housewives – in despite of objective disadvantages – were subjectively satisfied with their lives<sup>3</sup> as a mere validation of her thesis<sup>4</sup> that women led de facto a better life than men, while Schwarzer proposed to question the private notion of 'life satisfaction' politically.<sup>5</sup> This

Germany and the United States have long been seen as intertwined but scholarship has focused on migr works of the 1930s and 1940s on links between Weimar film and American film noir and on the conflicted relationship between directors of the New German Cinema and Hollywood Recently German film studies has begun reexamining the interconnection of the two film cultures and focusing on the internationalism of German cinema but little research has been done on contemporary German directors involvement in American cinema a gap in scholarship that this book fills The study offers ways of understanding current German cinematic engagement with America and different directorial responses to the hegemonic pressures of Hollywood It delineates the historical trajectory of German American film relations in the 20th century then analyzes the careers and works of four German born directors who have significant ties with American cinema Wolfgang Petersen Roland Emmerich Percy Adlon and Tom Tykwer A series of close readings of their productions isolates the cinematic practices and strategies with which these filmmakers negotiate the different national cultural and cinematic paradigms they traverse The book analyzes constructions of national cultural identity probes the boundaries of national cinemas and expands our understanding of emerging hybrid film cultures It is a contribution to German film studies and to the emerging field of transnational film studies Christine Haase is Associate Professor of German at the University of Georgia

Resisting History Barbara Ladd, 2012-01-02 In a major reinterpretation Resisting History reveals that women as subjects of writing and as writing subjects themselves played a far more important role in shaping the landscape of modernism than has been previously acknowledged Here Barbara Ladd offers powerful new readings of three southern writers who reimagined authorship between World War I and the mid 1950s Ladd argues that the idea of a new woman released from some of the traditional constraints of family and community more mobile and participating in new contractual forms of relationality precipitated a highly productive authorial crisis of gender in William Faulkner As new women themselves Zora Neale Hurston and Eudora Welty explored the territory of the authorial sublime and claimed for themselves and other women new forms of cultural agency Together these writers expose a territory of female suffering and aspiration that has been largely ignored in literary histories In opposition to the belief that women's lives and dreams are bound up in ideas of community and pre contractual forms of relationality Ladd demonstrates that all three writers Faulkner in As I Lay Dying Welty in selected short stories and in The Golden Apples and Hurston in Tell My Horse place women in territories where community is threatened or nonexistent and new opportunities for self definition can be seized And in A Fable Faulkner undertakes a related project in his exploration of gender and history in an era of world war focusing on men mourning and resistance and on the insurgences of the masses the feminized others of history in order to rethink authorship and resistance for a totalitarian age Filled with insights and written with obvious passion for the subject Resisting History challenges received ideas about history as a coherent narrative and about the development of U S modernism and points the way to new histories of literary and cultural modernisms in which the work of women shares center stage with the work of
