Harvill's celebrated Leopard series of anthologies comprises a selection of Hungarian prose and poetry from the second half of the twentieth century. Hungarian literature can be characterised as the literature of anxiety. Throughout the 1900s as Europe's political and social fortunes changed, Hungary's writers reflected on those changes, absorbing and distilling them in work of documentary, poetic or comically grotesque power. This anthology of fiction and poetry begins by setting out some of the major landmarks from the end of the Second World War, then concentrates on the period before, during and after the key date of 1989 when Central Europe was transformed once again. The volume traces that history of change from Marai's wartime diaries into the Stalinist period with the one-minute novels of Istvan Orkeny, past the paradoxical post-modernist humanism of Peter Esterhazy and through the haunted waste tracts of Laszlo Krasznahorkai. On the way it gathers together the monumental, the mystical, the garrulous and the inward-driven poetries of Janos Pilinszky, Sándor Weöres, Agnes Nemes Nagy, György Petri, Otto Orbán and Zsuzsa Rakovszky and many younger writers. This extraordinary journey takes us up to Hungary's return to the European fold as it moves from the psycho-geographic East towards the longed-for lost centre. It celebrates the anxiety, agitation, crying and whispering of the Hungarian literary imagination, posing the question that hangs above the door of the European Community: What is Europe? How do we live in it? And how do we respond to its darkness and its light.
