insects without understanding the dynamics of the relationship between an insect and its host plant. This relationship includes knowing what factors control forest insect populations such as food quality, tree vigor, host selection, and symbiotic relationships. The authors also discuss tree-injuring insects from the perspective of their influence on tree physiology and growth, as well as economic and commercial effects. The book represents a modern approach to the topic of forest and shade tree insects; it is well illustrated and includes a comprehensive primary reference list.

Beetle-pathogen Interactions in Conifer Forests Timothy Duane Schowalter, Gregory M. Filip, 1993. This text discusses advances in bark beetle and pathogen systematics, environmental and host factors predisposing trees to bark beetle or pathogen colonization, mechanism of interaction between bark beetles and pathogens, effects on trees and forest ecosystems, and management strategies. Annals of the Entomological Society of America, 2002.
