Hunger Problem Was not Solved Christian Gerlach,2024-02-14 The world food crisis 1972 1975 gave rise to new development concepts To eradicate world hunger small peasants were supposed to use modern inputs like high yielding seeds fertilizer pesticides and irrigation This would turn subsistence producers into business owners transform rural areas invigorate national economies and the crisis stricken world economy and thus stabilize capitalism Together with an in depth account of the world food crisis this book analyses how this global scheme largely failed It shows its diverse initiators their reasoning and motives its political breakthrough the degrees to which it was implemented globally and nationally in the following decades and its socioeconomic effects in rural areas Despite internationally coordinated policies and coercive means the scheme failed on all levels situation analysis design policies incapable institutions including big business implementation and peasants responses Selective realization in certain regions and for certain crops and the appropriation of funds by local elites often aggravated inequality and hunger Case studies are about Bangladesh Indonesia Tanzania and Mali The book shows limits to global social engineering imperialism and state control It is aimed at students scholars activists and non specialists interested in development and the world food problem The Open Access version of this book available at http www.taylorfrancis.com has been made available under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives CC BY NC ND 4 0 license Micronutrient policy process in Malawi Babu, Suresh Chandra,Haggblade,

Steven,Mkandawire, Elizabeth,Nankhuni, Flora,Hendriks, Sheryl L.,2016-11-14 Micronutrient deficiencies are common across the developing world and have major effects on the health outcomes of its population Although this is well understood many countries find it difficult to bring about policy change in this regard This paper uses micronutrient policies designed and implemented in Malawi as a case study to shed light on the barriers and gaps faced by developing countries for similar programs and policies To understand the drivers of policy change this paper uses the kaleidoscope model to trace the policy processes of three major micronutrients iodine vitamin A and iron Using a select set of policy process tools as well as field interviews with key informants who were part of Malawi s micronutrient policy process the authors test a set of hypotheses on 16 variables that drive policy change in the micronutrient policy sphere Results indicate that much of the agenda setting for micronutrient policies and programs was triggered by external events that focused on the elimination of micronutrient deficiencies as part of the global development agenda These events include the International Conference on Nutrition the Millennium Development Goals and more recently Scaling up Nutrition The design of micronutrient policies and program interventions in Malawi was adopted by locally mandated ministries and institutions in collaboration with development partners who provided both financial and technical support at the design stage The adoption of micronutrient policies and intervention programs was driven primarily by external funding particularly through supplementation programs related to vitamin A and iron Adoption of fortification standards for vitamin A has been going on for more than a decade due to continuous resistance from the private sector which faces additional costs and needs greater technical expertise The biofortification method of micronutrient interventions for iron and vitamin A is externally driven and relatively new in Malawi Although this method is widely accepted by policy makers no concrete strategy has been developed for its design adoption and implementation Further supplementation and fortification programs continue to face implementation challenges due to poor physical infrastructure and monitoring systems However the national institutional architecture required for agenda setting design adoption implementation evaluation and review to address micronutrient deficiencies is in place in Malawi The system needs continued support from development partners for effective functioning at all levels The use of various tools for the policy change part of the kaleidoscope model indicate that policy change is a dynamic process over time changes in the nature and composition of the members of policy and institutional architecture can result in different policy outcomes The Malawi case study demonstrates two things First local leadership is crucial in keeping micronutrient deficiencies on the policy making agenda and second it matters where coordinating power is placed in the policy hierarchy This paper finds that even with policy champions adopted policies will face implementation challenges unless they are supported with adequate resources and are systematically followed through to final execution and delivery
