

Unfinished Activism: Genealogies of Women's Movements and the Re-imagining of Feminist Peace and Resistance

Itziar Mujika Chao and Linda Gusia

Feminist activism in war and peace have a long history of erasure and distortion. Conventional accounts of war and peace have continuously ignored and obliterated women's agency by constantly marginalizing and objectifying their experiences. Despite the strength of women's agency in conflict to survive and navigate through violent gender-based and other power structures and dynamics, this history has been marginalized. The process of uncovering the herstories of the versatile traditions of feminist activism worldwide, along with the continuous labour of imagining, constructing and connecting different ways of resisting and doing feminist activism is ongoing.

Unearthing these experiences through similarities and contradictions embodied in women's activism and feminist trajectories, strategies and alliances seeking alternative forms of resistance against and from violence and marginalization, we delve into the past and future of feminist peace. Attentive to feminist demands in conflict and post-conflict contexts, as well as in contexts of apparent peace, we reflect on the erased herstories of women's and feminist activism in Kosovo. This conversation is a continuation of the many conversations that we have had through the years. We share a common interest and positionality in research, as well as in where and how we do research. In the past decade, we have both been interested in the women's movement and feminist activism in Kosovo:<sup>1</sup> how it started to develop and how it evolved, how it was directly influenced by the nonviolent civil resistance prior to the war (1989–97), the subsequent war (1998–99) and NATO intervention (1999), the external management by the international administration (mainly the United Nations Interim Mission in Kosovo, as well as the European Union later) and the continuous

Reimagining Masculinity and Violence in 'Game of Thrones' and 'A Song of Ice and Fire' Tobi Evans,2022-11-15 In this examination of violence and masculinity in George R R Martin s fantasy series A Song of Ice and Fire and its television adaptation Game of Thrones Tobi Evans offers a queer reading that revises the idea that the texts glorify violence Moving from monstrous men characters and sovereigns to female disabled and genderqueer masculinities Violent Fantasies understands the novels and television series to offer a complex and ambiguous negotiation of different types of violence Deploying queer feminist poststructuralist and psychoanalytic approaches to the acts of violence that masculine characters use Evans views hegemonic violence as part of a destructive cycle wherein characters use violence to dominate others but have their violence turned against them in such a way that their bodies become disgusting and they are unable to enter into systems of patriarchal reproduction. The only characters who succeed in proliferating their values and knowledges are those who use violence to care for others. These characters are also threatened with a bodily undoing when they use violence but their bodily borders are secured because of their connections to others and their queer kinship bonds. Violence transforms the body Evans argues in ways that are both circular and ideologically ambivalent.

Post-feminist Impasses in Popular Heroine Television Alison Horbury, 2015-07-28 Alison Horbury investigates the reprisal of the myth of Persephone a mother daughter plot of separation and initiation in post feminist television cultures where she argues it functions as a symptom expressing a complex around the question of sexual difference what Lacan calls sexuation where this question has been otherwise foreclosed.

Re-imagining Religion and Belief Baker, Christopher, Crisp, Beth R., 2018-08-29 The need to reimagine religion and belief is precipitated by their greater visibility in public life. Meanwhile social policy responses often see them from a problem based rather than an asset based approach. However with growing diversity of religion and belief in every sector comes the potential for new dialogues across previously impermeable policy and disciplinary silos. This volume brings together leading international authors to critically consider these challenges within legal and policy frameworks including security and cohesion welfare law health and social care inequality cohesion extremism migration and abuse. It challenges policy makers to re imagine religion and belief as an integral part of public life that contains resources practices forms of knowledge and experience that are essential to a coherent policy approach to diversity enhanced democracy and participation.

Feminist Subjects, Multi-media Penny Florence, Dee Reynolds, 1995 Examines a range of media from paintings and family photography through to opera film and TV to novels and poetry and challenges the traditional boundaries between the creative and the critical.

Sex Work in Southeast Asia Lisa Law, 2012-10-12 Southeast Asian sex workers are stereotypically understood as passive victims of the political economy and submissive to western men. The advent of HIV AIDS only compounds this image. Sex Work in Southeast Asia is a cultural critique of HIV AIDS prevention programmes targetting sex tourism industries in Southeast Asia.

The Social-spatial Practices of 'girl Power' Mary Elizabeth Thomas, 2002

Feminist (re)visions of the Subject Gail Currie, Celia Rothenberg, 2001-01-01 Feminist Re visions utilizes the study of space and place which extends through sociology anthropology cultural studies and area studies historical perspectives and philosophy as a paradigm for cross disciplinary inquiry. Noting that both the study of space place and feminism are transected by the lines of spacial conceptual and ontological disintegration in contemporary academia Gail Currie and Celia Rothenberg have culled a collection of writings drawn together from feminist scholars across several disciplines to address three questions how are subjects constituted in relation to the spaces and places they occupy how are those spaces and places in turn negotiated and transformed and how are feminists actively constructing new visions of the female subject in the context of the postmodern academic terrain This work sets the stage for the development of a productive feminist praxis in an academic world some fear has been relativized and depoliticized by the postmodern turn
