Local Mediterranean Food Plants and Nutraceuticals Michael Heinrich,Walter Erhard Müller,Claudio Galli,2006-01-01 As a result of domestication considered to be the most important cultural development of the past 13 000 years of human history we depend today on a tiny number of domesticated plant and animal species for our food supply Nevertheless people continue to gather food which grows around their homes or they cultivate local varieties of food plants as well as keep land races of domestic animals Generally wild varieties tend to be richer in micronutrients and bioactive secondary metabolites which are produced in adaptation to local environmental conditions. These metabolites trigger further adaptive responses by producing protective bioactive compounds which when ingested result in the transfer of protective effects to our organism. The preservation of local knowledge for future generations as well as the identification of new nutraceuticals by means of characterizing plant extracts with potential health beneficial effects are the main objectives of this book. The first part therefore focuses on the ethnobotanical study of local food plants in selected regions of the Mediterranean i.e. their use as well as beliefs and cultural practices associated with it. The biological pharmacological effects of these plants on selected mostly in vitro targets of the central nervous system and the cardiovascular system make up the second part highlighting the potential of these plants for developing novel health foods, herbal medicines or local products with beneficial effects on health. Those interested in an integrated approach to the identification of new and health beneficial foods will undoubtedly find this book a valuable source of information and an inspiration for new scientific approaches to this age old topic.

Basilicata and Southern Italy: Between Film and Ecology Alberto Baracco, Manuela Gieri, 2023-01-01. This volume offers an open transdisciplinary living space also green through which to explore the different connections between Basilicata and Southern Italy, cinema and ecology and thus to reflect on the different forms through which the historical, cultural and social contexts of Southern Italian regions have been variously identified and represented. In order to explore these connections the volume embraces a wide range of perspectives that may all be grouped under the key term film ecocriticism, offering the reader a thorough analysis not only of the different ways of representing reality but also of the processes of signification through which reality itself can be understood, rethought and transformed. This is the general framework within which the authors consider film as a proper effective medium for ecocritical and ecophilosophical reflections concerning not only Basilicata to which the greater part of the volume is dedicated but also Southern Italy and therefore its history and its territories, communities and identities. Furthermore in an even more general sense Basilicata and Southern Italy reconnects with the very idea of the South and of all Souths to which this volume is dedicated.

Health and Medicine in Early Medieval Southern Italy Patricia Skinner, 2022-02-22. Medical historians are already familiar with medieval southern Italy through research into its famed medical school at Salerno. This volume takes a broader view of healthcare seeking to illuminate the experience of sickness, attitudes towards the ill and infirm and the provision of care up to the twelfth century. Combining information from hagiography and chronicles with less well known charters and archaeology it deals with the provision of food the environment women s health individual and collective disease and varieties of cure A final chapter assesses the interaction between intellectual and practical medicine as well as re examining the early life of the medical school at Salerno The book s importance lies in its wide ranging approach and detailed analysis which will appeal to historians of medicine and medieval culture alike A16 Nate Appleman, Shelley Lindgren, 2008 A cookbook and wine guide from the San Francisco restaurant A16 that celebrates the traditions of southern Italy Provided by publisher Illustration: A Theoretical and Contextual Perspective Alan Male, 2007-07-25 Successful forward thinking illustrators no longer operate the way many did and still do as merely colouring in technicians receiving briefs that are heavily directed and prescribed regarding content and overall visual concept Nowadays illustrators need to be educated socially and culturally aware communicators having knowledge understanding and insight regarding the context within which they are working the subject matter that they are engaged with and to be able professionals working within the parameters and needs of the market place and target audiences They need to utilise a breadth of intellectual and practical skills some that might once be regarded as transferable from other disciplines but are now considered essential if the illustrator has ambitions to transcend the basic role of commissioned hack This book introduces the concept of the illustrator as a specialist or authority on a particular subject or as an originator of either fiction and or non fiction material Examples include effective and creative written communication and authorship academic research art direction and design management The book focuses on illustration education and theory in particular the latter stages of undergraduate development and post graduate study and research such as theoretical and intellectual processes research and visual language Definitions and philosophies of what illustration is are also featured together with a relevant historical overview
