

READING A TEXT CRITICALLY

Introduction

Fig. 1. The woman intends to change the way she thinks, as she is reading from a book which may help her.

Kacey Riel said, "Reading makes the mind grow," and there is truth to that statement. The woman in the picture has the initiative to change how she thinks because she is willing to read and learn from the book she's reading. However, before we can change the way we think, we must learn how to read critically. By reading critically, we can determine if the texts we read are of quality and worth our time.

Critical Reading

Critical reading is a way to read more actively. It requires readers to use their critical thinking skills to question both the text itself and their manner of understanding it. During the critical reading process, our goal is to find a deeper understanding of the content, whether it is fiction or nonfiction text.
