Abstract

Social science scholarship has identified complex linkages between society and science, but it has been less successful at actually enhancing those linkages in ways that can add to the value and capability of each sector. We propose a research program to integrate natural science and engineering investigations with social science and policy research from the outset — what we call “real-time technology assessment” (real-time TA). Comprising investigations into analogical case studies, research program mapping, communication and early warning, and technology assessment and choice, real-time TA can inform and support natural science and engineering research, and it can provide an explicit mechanism for observing, critiquing, and influencing social values as they become embedded in innovations. After placing real-time TA in the context of scholarship on technology assessment, the paper elaborates on this coordinated set of research tasks, using the example of nano-scale science and engineering (nanotechnology) research. The paper then discusses issues in the implementation of real-time TA and concludes that the adoption of real-time TA can significantly enhance the societal value of research-based innovation. © 2002 Elsevier Science Ltd. 1. Introduction

Scientific and technological innovation continually remakes society. Society reciprocally accommodates, manages, and redirects innovation. Social science scholarship has contributed to a broader and more nuanced understanding of this “coproduction” of science and society in traditional scientific arenas such as laboratories,

Readings in Multimedia Computing and Networking Kevin Jeffay, Hong Jiang Zhang, 2001-08-10 Readings in Multimedia Computing and Networking captures the broad areas of research and developments in this burgeoning field distills the key findings and makes them accessible to professionals researchers and students alike For the first time the most influential and innovative papers on these topics are presented in a cohesive form giving shape to the diverse area of multimedia computing. The seminal moments are recorded by a dozen visionaries in the field and each contributing editor provides a context for their area of research by way of a thoughtful focused chapter introduction. The volume editors Kevin Jeffay and HongJiang Zhang offer further incisive interpretations of past and present developments in this area including those within media and content processing operating systems and networking support for multimedia. This book will provide you with a sound understanding of the theoretical and practical issues at work in the field's continuing evolution. Offers an in depth look at the technical challenges in multimedia and provides real and potential solutions that promise to expand the role of multimedia in business entertainment and education. Examines in Part One issues at the heart of multimedia processes the means by which multimedia data are coded compressed indexed retrieved and otherwise manipulated. Examines in Part Two the accommodation of these processes by storage systems operating systems network protocols and applications. Written by leading researchers the introductions give shape to a field that is continually defining itself and place the key research findings in context to those who need to understand the state of the art developments.
