Investigating Social Realism: with reference to Sweet Sixteen (2002) and This Is England (2006) Within the last few years British Cinema and Realism have been linked. "Realism began in the 1930's with documentary films, and a prime example of this is with the 'father of documentary' John Grierson, who founded the British documentary movement and created classic films such as Drifters (1929), Industrial Britain (1933), Song of Ceylon (1934) and Night Mail (1936). "In which British Cinema depicting the daily lifestyles of working class citizens. Social Realism presents a tenacious raw and grim image of lifestyles explored by the working class.

It is conventional for social realism to be filmed with natural lighting, as it help encode realism, with also de saturated colours as Social realism tends to deal with real life issues, as the mood of the media text typically tends to be negative. Over the years the genre has been seen to have a gloomy reputation, which has seen an increase in box office revenue. For example Kidulthood which depicted gang culture with the streets of London, The film was of a low budget (which is normally conventional for a social realist films) and was funded by the UK film council.

Social realist films tend to consist of the socio-economic group of an ABC1 audience and a psychographic group of aspirers from the age range of 30-60 with a secondary audience of students. Social realism can be seen to educate and inform users about grim issues faced upon society. The upper band of the socio economic group, the ABC1 group would tend to use the film for a sense of personal identity or surveillance (Blumer and Katz, 1974) whereas the lower end of socio economic group, C2, D and E audience would use social realism for diversion to gain a sense of escapism from the outside world.

Better than any other genre, social realism has shown us to ourselves, pushing the boundaries in the effort to put the experiences of real Britons on the screen, and shaping our ideas of what British cinema can be. " It is conventional for Social Realism films to have low production values, with a majority of films within the last few years funded by the now closed UK Film Council (UKFC). The UK film council was funded by through sources including the National Lottery. It distributed more than ? 160m of lottery money to over 900 films. Most of which was of the genre of Social Realism.

Established directors such as Ken Loach have created many successfully social realism films with low budgets. For example His most commercially successful recent film is 2009's Looking for Eric (Ken Loach, 2009) featuring a depressed postman's conversations with the ex-Manchester United football star, Eric Cantona (played by Cantona himself). A measure of Loach's difficulties gaining broad release for his work is the fact that this film ended up making only ? 12,000 profit. The film received critical acclaim and won the Magritte Award

Realism An Essay In Interpretation And Social Realism:

Realism, an Essay in Interpretation and Social Reality David J. Levy, 1981 Rethinking Social Realism Stacy I. Morgan, 2004 The social realist movement with its focus on proletarian themes and its strong ties to New Deal programs and leftist politics has long been considered a depression era phenomenon that ended with the start of World War II This study explores how and why African American writers and visual artists sustained an engagement with the themes and aesthetics of social realism into the early cold war era far longer than a majority of their white counterparts Stacy I Morgan recalls the social realist atmosphere in which certain African American artists and writers were immersed and shows how black social realism served alternately to question the existing order instill race pride and build interracial working class coalitions Morgan discusses among others such figures as Charles White John Wilson Frank Marshall Davis Willard Motley Langston Hughes Sterling Brown Elizabeth Catlett and Hale Woodruff Socialist Cultures East and West Dubravka Juraga, M. Keith Booker, 2002-06-30 Decades of Western Cold War propaganda were designed to depict socialism as inimical to genuine aesthetic achievement Now in the wake of the Cold War it is becoming possible to reassess the past and present cultural productions of artists with socialist inclinations The essays in this volume begin such a reassessment finding that socialist cultural production in the 20th century both as the official culture of the socialist East and as an oppositional culture in the capitalist West has been rich and varied The volume focuses on socialist culture in the industrialized world primarily Eastern Europe and the West An introductory essay overviews socialist cultural productions of the 20th century while the chapters that follow address a wide range of topics These include Soviet socialist realist fiction and film musicals the socialist drama of Bertolt Brecht and British and American leftist fiction The volume demonstrates that propagandistic Cold War depictions of socialism as a threat to artistic expression were inaccurate and misleading The Philosopher's Index, 1992 Vols for 1969 include a section of abstracts Realism's Others Eva Aldea, Geoffrey Baker, 2010-07-12 For at least a century scholarship on realist narrative and occasional polemics against realist narrative have assumed that realism promotes the values of sameness against those of otherness and that it does so by use of a narrative mode that excludes certain epistemologies ideologies and ways of thinking However the truth is more complex than that as the essays in this volume all demonstrate Realism's Others examines the various strategies by which realist narratives create the idea of difference whether that difference is registered in terms of class ethnicity epistemology nationality or gender The authors in this collection examine in detail not just the fact of otherness in some canonical realist and canonical magical realist and postmodern novels but the actual means by which that otherness is established by the text These essays suggest that neither realist narrative nor narratives positioned as anti realist take otherness for granted rather the texts discussed here actively create difference and this creation of difference often occasions severe difficulties for the novels representational schema How does one represent different types of knowledge other aesthetic modes or other spaces for example in texts whose epistemology has long been seen as secular and empirical whose aesthetic mode has always been approached as pure descriptive mimesis and whose settings are largely domestic These essays all begin with a certain collision of nationalities of classes of representational matrices of religions and go on to chart the challenges that this collision presents to our ideas or stereotypes of realism or to the possibilities of writing against and beyond realism This question motivates examination of key realist or social realist texts in some of these essays by Honoré de Balzac George Eliot Franz Grillparzer Theodor Storm Gottfried Keller Theodor Fontane Wilhelm Raabe Marcel Amparo Ruiz de Burton Henry James William Dean Howells Charles Chesnutt Theodore Dreiser H T Tsiang Alan Sillitoe and Richard Yates However it is no less central a question in certain non realist texts which engage realist aims to a surprising degree often to debate them openly some of these essays discuss in this light fantastic magical realist and postmodern works by Abram Tertz Paul Auster Alejo Carpentier Toni Morrison Gabriel García Márquez Salman Rushdie and A S Byatt Realism becomes more than an aesthetic aim or narrative mode It becomes rather a value evoked and discussed by all of the works analyzed here in order to reveal its impact on fiction's treatment of ethnicity nationality ideology space gender and social class

A History of Russian Literature Andrew Kahn, Mark Naumovich Lipovetskiĭ, Irina Reyfman, Stephanie Sandler, 2018 Russia possesses one of the richest and most admired literatures of Europe reaching back to the eleventh century A History of Russian Literature provides a comprehensive account of Russian writing from its earliest origins in the monastic works of Kiev up to the present day still rife with the creative experiments of post-Soviet literary life

The volume proceeds chronologically in five parts extending from Kievan Rus in the 11th century to the present day. The coverage strikes a balance between extensive overview and in depth thematic focus. Parts are organized thematically in chapters which a number of keywords that are important literary concepts that can serve as connecting motifs and case studies in depth discussions of writers institutions and texts that take the reader up close and Visual material also underscores the interrelation of the word and image at a number of points particularly significant in the medieval period and twentieth century. The History addresses major continuities and discontinuities in the history of Russian literature across all periods and in particular bring out trans historical features that contribute to the notion of a national literature. The volume s time range has the merit of identifying from the early modern period a vital set of national stereotypes and popular folklore about boundaries space Holy Russia and the charismatic king that offers culturally relevant material to later writers. This volume delivers a fresh view on a series of key questions about Russia s literary history by providing new mappings of literary history and a narrative that pursues key concepts rather more than individual authorial careers. This holistic narrative underscores the ways in which context and text are densely woven in Russian literature and demonstrates that the most exciting way to understand the canon and the development of tradition is through a discussion of the interrelation of major and minor figures historical events and literary politics literary theory and literary innovation.

Realism and Christian Faith Andrew Moore, 2003-03-27 The question of realism that is whether God exists independently of human beings is central to much contemporary theology and church life. It is also an important topic in the philosophy of religion. This book discusses the relationship between realism and Christian faith in a thorough and systematic way and uses the resources of both philosophy and theology to argue for a Christocentric narrative realism. Many previous defences of realism have attempted to model Christian belief on scientific theory but Moore argues that this comparison is misleading and inadequate on both theological and philosophical grounds. In dialogue with speech act theory and critiques of realism by both non realists and Wittgensteinians a new account of the meaningfulness of Christian language is proposed. Moore uses this to develop a regulative conception of realism according to which God s independent reality is shown principally in Christ and then through Christian practices and the lives of Christians.

The Contemporary Spanish Novel Samuel Amell, 1996-01-19 Although there are several annotated bibliographies of contemporary Spanish novelists this book covers critical works published on the post civil war Spanish novel as a literary form. The volume cites books and articles and each citation is accompanied by a descriptive and evaluative annotation. The work contains a section of entries on books and another on articles. Entries within each section are arranged alphabetically. Included are entries primarily for studies published in English or Spanish though some in Catalan French Galician and Italian are also cited. In the last decades there has been an explosion of critical works on the post civil war Spanish novel. This proliferation of material causes serious problems for scholars conducting research on the subject. While there are bibliographies of particular novelists this book deals with general studies of trends topics and comparative approaches The volume primarily cites works published in English or Spanish but it also includes some in Catalan French Galician and Italian The volume is divided into two sections books and articles Within each section entries are arranged alphabetically Each citation is accompanied by a descriptive and evaluative annotation The annotations provide information about the topic content and methodology of the works cited and express an opinion of the works value The length of the annotations varies according to the importance of the topic Author and title indexes add to the utility of the work

The Atlantic Realists Matthew Specter, 2022-02-08 In The Atlantic Realists intellectual historian Matthew Specter offers a boldly revisionist interpretation of realism a prevalent stance in post WWII US foreign policy and public discourse and the dominant international relations theory during the Cold War Challenging the common view of realism as a set of universally binding truths about international affairs Specter argues that its major features emerged from a century long dialogue between American and German intellectuals beginning in the late nineteenth century Specter uncovers an Atlantic realist tradition of reflection on the prerogatives of empire and the nature of power politics conditioned by fin de siècle imperial competition two world wars the Holocaust and the Cold War Focusing on key figures in the evolution of realist thought including Carl Schmitt Hans Morgenthau and Wilhelm Grewe this book traces the development of the realist worldview over a century dismantling myths about the national interest Realpolitik and the art of statesmanship
