Central Government's Management of Service Contracts House of Commons Public Accounts Committ, 2009-04-28 In 2007/08 central government spent over 12 billion on service contracts primarily in the areas of information and communication technology facilities management and business process outsourcing and an estimated 240 million on managing these contracts In most cases central government monitors the performance of its suppliers but it makes limited use of financial incentives to encourage suppliers to improve performance and does not always apply financial penalties where suppliers under performed Testing of value for money of ongoing services and contract changes is variable Planning and governance is one of the weaker areas of contract management Less than half the organisations surveyed had an individual with overall responsibility for contract management and there was no documented plan for managing 28 per cent of contracts In addition many contracts do not have in place some or all of the elements of good practice risk management No commercial director head of procurement rated the level of resources allocated to the management of their major contracts as good and 22 per cent of contract managers considered they did not have time to perform their responsibilities well Most contract managers had undertaken relevant training although 60 per cent of organisations did not provide a structured training programme for their staff The Office of Government Commerce is to issue further guidance on contract management in April 2009 building on the good practice framework it published jointly with the National Audit Office and it is working to improve the provision of training on contract management It is also extending its monitoring of major suppliers to government and is reviewing recent examples of service failure where contractors failed to perform to identify lessons for the future

Juliff, 2013-06-05 The power of modern information systems and information technology ISIIT offers new opportunities to rethink at the broadest levels existing business strategies approaches and practices Over the past decade IT has opened up new business opportunities led to the development of new strategic IS and challenged all managers and users of ISIIT to devise new ways to make better use of information Yet this era which began with much confidence and optimism is now suffering under a legacy of systems that are increasingly failing to meet business needs and lasting fixes are proving costly and difficult to implement General management is experiencing a crisis of confidence in their IS functions and in the chief information systems officers who lead them Earl and Feeney 1994 11 The concern for chief executive officers is that they are confronting a situation that is seemingly out of control They are asking What is the best way to rein in these problems and effectively assess IS performance Further how can we be certain that IS is adequately adding value to the organisational bottom line On the other hand IS executives and professionals who are responsible for creating managing and maintaining the organisation's systems are worried about the preparedness of general managers to cope with the growth in new technologies and systems They see IT having a polarising effect on general managers it either bedazzles or frightens them Davenport 1994 119
