

MANAGING Today BY UTILIZING TECHNOLOGY

MEMBER ARTICLE | BY JENNIFER STEADMAN BSDH, RDH, DAADOM

Whether you are managing one office, 50, or 200, you need to stay organized and always be on your game. By implementing and utilizing technology you can use your time wisely and always have your fingers on the pulse of your practice(s) and team. Before implementing any new resource or making appropriate changes, you need to research the best product for you based on the needs of your team. Maybe they have challenges making sure all tasks are completed or communicating between multiple locations. Poll your team and see where their pain points are.

Project management tools can be extremely beneficial to every practice, big or small. The right tool can help you organize your day-to-day checklists all the way to planning your new marketing and rebranding project. This is not your average run-of-the-mill checklist. It is a place where you can assign team members or guests (third party vendors) tasks, they can make updates, mark items as "working on it", "need help", and "completed". It helps to hold people accountable and leaves you time to focus on other things. How great would it be to create something where you could share update requests for your new website with the developer, they could message you through the system, and mark the item completed when they finished? Awesome, right?! At the same time, your assistant just updated the status on her task of cleaning the sterilizers and added a file showing that your autoclave passed the weekly testing.

By utilizing a project management tool in daily practice, your team is responsible for their tasks and they are empowered to do more! Every time they complete a task, they get a virtual "kudos". This is also a great reference when completing your annual performance evaluations because the system tracks each team member's tasks, deadlines, and status updates. You can create different boards for out-of-office tracking, expense reports, equipment warranty/maintenance, and so much more!

Statistic and analytic software can be a wonderful tool to track everything you could ever think of and more. Some software can pull more data than your practice management system is even capable of! You can measure your Key Performance Indicators (KPIs) real-time without having to do any calculations on your own. It is an easy way to keep the pulse of your practice and providers.

Analytic software isn't all about production and collections. Dive deeper and see what the numbers tell you. It can help you determine where your team may need additional training or support.
