Liverpool in 1887 when nurses paid daily visits to a few schools for the purpose of attending to minor injuries and complaints They also called at the homes of Children who had more serious ailments and urged the parents to obtain the services of a physician The early school nurses were volunteers and it was not until 1901 that the London School Board appointed salaried municipal school nurses with definite duties assigned They examined the children for contagious skin diseases and excluded all cases found The nurses did not treat the cases and consulted only occasionally with the school medical officer Later the nurse tested the vision and hearing and kept a record of the physical examinations of the pupils About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
