Augustine on Memory Kevin G. Grove, 2021 Augustine of Hippo indisputably one of the most important figures for the study of memory is credited with establishing memory as the inner source of selfhood and locus of the search for God Yet those who study memory in Augustine have never before taken into account his preaching His sermons are the sources of memory's greatest development for Augustine In Augustine's preaching especially on the Psalms the interior gives way to communal exterior Both the self and search for God are re-established in a shared Christological identity and the communal labors of remembering and forgetting This book opens with Augustine's early works and Confessions as the beginning of memory and concludes with Augustine's Trinity and preaching on Psalm 50 as the end of memory The heart of the book the work of memory sets forth how ongoing remembering and forgetting in Christ are for Augustine are foundational to the life of grace To that end Augustine and his congregants go leaping in memory together keep festival with abiding traces and become forgetful runners like St Paul Remembering and forgetting in Christ the ongoing work of memory prove for Augustine to be actions of reconciliation of the distended experiences of human life of praising and groaning labouring and resting solitude and communion Augustine on Memory presents this new communal and Christological paradigm not only for Augustinian studies but also for theologians philosophers ethicists and interdisciplinary scholars of memory

Jewish-Christian Dialogue and the Life of Wisdom Matthew Levering, 2011-10-27 This book inquires as to whether theological dialogue between Christians and Jews is possible not only in itself but also as regards the emergence of communities of Messianic Judaism In light of David Novak's insights Matthew Levering proposes that Christian theological responses to supersessionism need to preserve both the Church's development of doctrine and Rabbinic Judaism's ability to define its own boundaries. The book undertakes constructive philosophical theology in dialogue with Novak. Exploring the interrelated doctrines of divine providence, theonomy, the image of God, and natural law, Levering places Novak's work in conversation especially with Thomas Aquinas, whose approach fosters a rich dialogue with Novak's broadly Maimonidean perspective. It focuses upon the relationship of human beings to the Creator with attention to the philosophical entailments of Jewish and Christian covenantal commitments, aiming to spell out what true freedom involves. It concludes by asking whether Christians and Jews would do better to bracket our covenantal commitments in pursuing such wisdom. Drawing upon Novak's work, the author argues that in the face of suffering and death, God's covenantal election makes possible hope lacking which the quest for wisdom runs aground.

The Seductiveness of Virtue John J. Fitzgerald, 2016-12-15 John J. Fitzgerald addresses here one of life's enduring questions: how to achieve personal fulfillment, and more specifically, whether we can do so through ethical conduct. He focuses on two significant twentieth-century theologians: Rabbi Abraham Joshua Heschel and Pope John Paul II, seeing both as fitting dialogue partners given the former's influence on the Second Vatican Council's deliberations on the Jews and the latter's groundbreaking overtures to the Jews in the wake of his experiences in Poland before and during World War II. Fitzgerald demonstrates that Heschel and John Paul II both suggest that doing good generally leads us to growth in various components of personal fulfillment, such as happiness, meaning in life, and freedom from selfish desires. There are, however, some key differences between the two theologians. John Paul II emphasizes more strongly the relationship between acting well and attaining eternal life, whereas Heschel wrestles more openly with the possibility that religious commitment ultimately involves anxiety and sadness. By examining historical and contemporary analyses, including the work of the Fourteenth Dalai Lama, the philosopher Peter Singer, and some present-day psychologists, Fitzgerald builds a narrative that shows the promise and limits of Heschel's and John Paul II's views.

In the Shadow of Death Elizabeth Beck, Sarah Britto, Arlene Andrews, 2007-02-08 The press called Martin's actions a crime spree. Already convicted of armed robbery, Martin was facing the death penalty. In less than two weeks, the jury would decide his fate. Terrified that his son would be sentenced to die, Phillip did the only thing he felt he could do: in an act of faith and desperation, in his garage with the car exhaust running, Phillip made the consummate sacrifice to spare his son the ultimate punishment. Ironically, his suicide presented Martin with another chance at life: the jury, moved by Martin's loss, spared his life. Phillip's story, like those of the other parents, siblings, children, and cousins chronicled in this book, vividly illustrates the precarious position family members of capital offenders occupy in the criminal justice system. At once outsiders and victims, they live in the shadow of death, crushed by trauma, grief, and helplessness. In this penetrating account of guilt and innocence, shame and triumph, devastating loss and ultimate redemption, the voices of these family members add a new dimension to debates about capital punishment and how communities can prevent and address crime. Restorative justice theory, which views violent crime as an extreme violation of relationships searches for ways to hold offenders accountable and meets the needs of victims and communities torn apart by the crime organizes these narratives and integrates offenders families into the process of transforming conflict and promoting justice and healing for all What emerges from hundreds of hours worth of in depth interviews with family members of offenders and victims legal teams and leaders in the abolition and restorative justice movements is a vision of justice strongly rooted in the social fabric of communities Showing that forgiveness and recovery are possible in the wake of even the most heinous crimes while holding victims stories sacred this eye opening book bridges the pain of living in the shadow of death with the possibility of a reparative form of justice Anyone working with victims offenders and their families from lawyers and social workers to mediators and activists will find this riveting work indispensable to their efforts
