Mental Health In Remote Rural Developing Areas Concepts And Cases:

Mental Health in Remote, Rural Developing Areas Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry. Committee on Therapeutic Care, 1995 Seventy five percent of the world's population lives in developing countries or in rural locations that lack most standard mental health services These people have to cope with inadequate transportation and communication infrastructure housing and sanitation problems low educational levels poverty high rates of certain infectious diseases and lack of professional human resources Access to even basic health care is limited In the constant battle to provide the basic necessities for rural areas these residents have received little attention with regard to mental health Mental Health in Remote Rural Developing Areas GAP Report 139 uses examples from rural villages in Alaska and other developing areas of the world It illustrates the social and environmental influences that shape health and mental health care The book includes cases and discussions that focus on the role of the public psychiatrist who in these settings often has limited ability to pick and choose which problems to deal with and who also has multiple options for conceptualizing a problem and taking action Approaches described in the book include extensive use of community education to encourage local people to maintain healthy lifestyles This book will be of interest not only to psychiatrists but also to mental health professionals in different countries and work settings

Adolescent Suicide Group for the Advancement of Psychiatry. Committee on Adolescence, 1996 Even the most skilled therapist may underestimate suicide potential Careful assessment and competent psychiatric intervention cannot always predict the suicidality of a particular person Adolescent Suicide GAP Report 140 presents techniques that allow psychiatrists and all those caring for the health and welfare of adolescents to respond to signals of distress with timely therapeutic intervention It also suggests measures of anticipatory prevention Adolescent Suicide presents an overview of adolescent suicidal behavior It explores risk factors the identification and evaluation of the suicidal adolescent and approaches to therapy It offers both historical and cross cultural perspectives the relevance of suicide to adolescent development mental health training needs regarding suicidality and related issues such as public health policies and medicolegal concerns The risk of suicide presents a unique crisis in adolescent development For this reason all mental health professionals will find this report an indispensable tool in the treatment of adolescents at risk for suicide Drawing from years of combined experience this committee has applied its expertise on adolescent development to the sobering problem of suicide
