1. INTRODUCTION

The existence of Islamic educational institutions requires marketing or promotion as an organization or professional institution. The marketing is done to identify and describe the level of public interest towards the institution concerned. Not only educational institutions that have to establish but long-standing ones also need promotion, even those that are already well-known. Promotional activities can also use as an explanation and rationalization mechanism for a program offering various advantages, both in terms of inputs, outputs, and graduates (outcomes). Besides, promotion is a means to convey public accountability about the process and results of education that have been implemented and developed. The image and credibility of an institution will last long if it is always aware of, maintain, and develop various right conditions from time to time. By way of promotion, the decline in interest can use as a basis for tracing the weaknesses of institutions internally and external factors involved in forming negative opinions on the institution. From here, a learning institution for the next step improvement. That is why there are educational institutions that are expensive, far from locations, difficult to enter but are still sought by the community. [1] Referring to Early Childhood Education Standards, early childhood education institutions (PAUD) are the only primary educational institutions that have many products. The early childhood education institutions manage the education of children aged 0-6 years, which includes: Day Care (0-2 years), Play Group (2-4 years), and Kindergarten (4-6 years). [2] Thus, as a professional institution, the concept of marketing strategy still refers to the marketing strategy of economics that adapt to the marketing of RA institutions. The concept is oriented to consumer satisfaction, promotes the values of community service, and does not neglect the welfare of educators and the provision of adequate educational facilities. According to Imam Robandi (in Mulyana, 2012) that the growth of a school is no longer taboo openly discussed can follow the social dynamics of the community. [3] The growth of RA-level educational institutions in Indonesia mark by the emergence of Islamic kindergartens such as Al-Azhar 21 Kindergarten, Budi Mulia Dua Kindergarten, Primagama Kindergarten, Khalifa Kindergarten, Lazuardi, Integrated Islamic Kindergarten, and others in the context of school marketing was much appreciated positive from the community. In a relatively short time, these schools overgrew and received high interest from the community. The RA institutions, in general, are older but tend to be stagnant both in terms of several students, quality, and educational facilities. As for the new schools, it is never empty of enthusiasts and is increasingly expanding branches in the regions. The ability of these institutions to take positioning, differentiation, and branding is a force that can influence consumers (communities) to become loyal customers (service users). According to Kotler (2000), the ability to meet people's desires according to their social needs is the success of marketing. What are the wants and needs of the community that are captured as opportunities and realizes by providing professional and satisfying services? With modern management, these leading educational institutions have succeeded in building positive branding in the community. [4] Based on data from the Education Unit (NPSN) PAUD Kemendikbud in 2018 that in terms of quantity, the number of RA institutions is far less than TK (Kindergarten). [5] The number of TK / RA unit institutions is 120,891, with the composition of TK at 92,009 and RA at 28,882 (Table 1). From these data, it appears that people prefer TK rather than RA.
