

Quality Management

Deming's 14 Steps

1. Create a long-term vision for the organization.
2. Establish a mission statement that defines the organization's purpose and values.
3. Set quality goals that are measurable and achievable.
4. Implement a system of statistical process control (SPC) to monitor and control the quality of the organization's processes.
5. Establish a system of continuous improvement (CI) to ensure that the organization's processes are always improving.
6. Establish a system of employee participation to ensure that all employees are involved in the quality improvement process.
7. Establish a system of customer focus to ensure that the organization is always meeting the needs of its customers.
8. Establish a system of supplier focus to ensure that the organization is always working with the best suppliers.
9. Establish a system of financial focus to ensure that the organization is always operating at a profit.
10. Establish a system of communication to ensure that all employees are always informed of the organization's quality goals and progress.
11. Establish a system of training to ensure that all employees are always equipped with the skills and knowledge needed to improve the organization's quality.
12. Establish a system of recognition to ensure that all employees are always rewarded for their contributions to the organization's quality improvement efforts.
13. Establish a system of documentation to ensure that all quality improvement efforts are properly recorded and tracked.
14. Establish a system of review to ensure that the organization is always evaluating its quality improvement efforts and making necessary adjustments.
