Loss and Loyalty - Moabites Christine Dillon, 2025-10-21 What makes someone family blood love or something more Arielle believed she was an Israelite until her brother confessed the truth she was found as an infant on their doorstep in Moab After tragedy strikes and the men of her household are snatched away Arielle must leave the only land she's ever known and any hope of finding her birth family to follow her adopted mother family to Bethlehem But Bethlehem is not the land of plenty described in the stories of God's promises once told to Arielle by her beloved adopted father Treated as outsiders they must scrape together a life among people who barely tolerate them The God of Israel is said to protect the orphan and the widow but what happens when His people reject His laws As Arielle wrestles with loss identity and the silence of a God she's unsure how to trust one question haunts her if her own birth parents abandoned her why wouldn't a foreign God do the same To belong Arielle must choose where her loyalty lies between the past that shaped her and the God who might have a purpose for her future Abandoned Unseen Not forgotten
