Managing Irrigation Analyzing And Improving The Performance Of Bureaucracies:

Managing Irrigation Norman Thomas Uphoff, Priti Ramamurthy, Roy Steiner, 1991 Managing Irrigation Norman Uphoff, Priti Ramamurthy, Roy Steiner, 1991-05 Increasing attention has been given in recent years to how the participation of farmers in irrigation management can improve the efficiency equity and overall performance of irrigation systems This book addresses the other part of the management equation namely the structure and performance of bureaucracies that are responsible for managing these systems

Assessing the outcomes of IWMI's research and interventions on irrigation management transfer Giordano, Meredith, Samad, Madar, Namara, Regassa, 2006 The purpose of this paper is to summarize IIMI IWMI's past research and interventions related to irrigation management transfer and to document to the extent possible the academic policy and technical outcomes of these efforts The application of a range of direct and indirect measurement techniques suggests an overall positive contribution from IWMI to IMT theory and application

Improving Irrigation in Asia Elinor Ostrom, W. F. Lam, Prachanda Pradhan, 2011-01-01 A unique and significant longitudinal study of irrigation intervention in FMIS in Nepal that revives important debates on how irrigation management evolves and how this can be investigated This concise and accessible book can inform and challenge agencies and donors to reflect on policies and researchers to argue further the study of collective action and political theory in irrigation management Linden Vincent Wageningen University The Netherlands Improving Irrigation in Asia by Elinor Ostrom and colleagues is grounded in intimate detail on water management experience in Nepal while being informed by broadly applicable concepts and behavioral theories It greatly advances our understanding of management options and effects As the water resources available for agriculture become more limited and unreliable the efficiency and productivity with which irrigation water is used must be increased While better technology can assist in this quest the greatest potential gains lie in the social and organizational domains Norman Uphoff Cornell University US Governance of irrigation systems is complex needing social technical and financial actions that support farming Few people have as much knowledge of self governing irrigation systems as these authors and few countries have as many of these systems as Nepal Lessons from these small irrigation systems can be adapted to much larger units and to other kinds of activity External assistance on a modest scale could generate practical benefit by encouraging self reliance in communities Charles Abernethy International Irrigation Management Institute Colombo 1987 94 and Asian Institute of Technology Thailand 1996 99 Improving Irrigation in Asia is based on a longitudinal study over two decades on innovative intervention for sustained performance of irrigation systems The work identifies key factors that can help explain the performance of interventions and explicates lessons for resource management and the management of development assistance In 1985 the Water and Energy Commission Secretariat of Nepal and the International Irrigation Management Institute developed an ingenious intervention program for nineteen irrigation systems located in the middle hills of Nepal in an attempt to overcome the prevailing best practices traps in regard to assisting irrigation systems This book highlights the innovativeness of the project lay in its provision of ample opportunities for farmers to make decisions regarding the operation of the irrigation system based on their local knowledge and creativity The authors of this work Elinor Ostrom Wai Fung Lam Prachanda Pradhan and Ganesh P Shivakoti provide detailed analysis of these interventions and support the conclusion that farmers can build on an innovative intervention that not only provides physical improvements but also enhances farmers problem solving capacity They argue that to achieve sustainable improvements in performance the farmers themselves need to engage in collective action over time and support local entrepreneurs who provide leadership and stimulate adjustments to change Providing practical policy solutions this study will prove a fascinating and invaluable read for academics and scholars of development studies resource management and irrigation studies as well as development specialists in international agencies policymakers in governments and international donor agencies

The SAGE Handbook of Governance Mark Bevir,2010-12-14 The study of governance has risen to prominence as a way of describing and explaining changes in our world The SAGE Handbook of Governance presents an authoritative and innovative overview of this fascinating field with particular emphasis on the significant new and emerging theoretical issues and policy innovations The Handbook is divided into three parts Part one explores the major theories influencing current thinking and shaping future research in the field of governance Part two deals specifically with changing practices and policy innovations including the changing role of the state transnational and global governance markets and networks public management and budgeting and finance Part three explores the dilemmas of managing governance including attempts to rethink democracy and citizenship as well as specific policy issues such as capacity building regulation and sustainable development This volume is an excellent resource for advanced students and researchers in political science economics geography sociology and public administration Mark Bevir is a Professor of Political Science at the University of California Berkeley

Managing Salinization Waltina Scheumann,2012-12-06 Salinization of soils is a major threat to irrigated agriculture and counteracts the targets of costly public infrastructure investments In this study salinization is regarded as the outcome of an institutional arrangement which impedes the effective implementation of well known and well established control measures be they technical managerial or economic In public irrigation systems neither the management units nor the farmers are offered any incentives towards the control of high groundwater levels and salinization if the management units are embedded in a highly centralized non market institutional setting The author answers the question under which conditions management units and irrigators are active in halting and reversing the process of salinization

Institutional Design Principles for Accountability in Large Irrigation Systems Douglas J. Merrey,Margreet Zwarteveen,1996 Argues that single irrigation systems managed by autonomous system specific organizations accountable to their customers perform better and are more sustainable than those managed by agencies dependent on the government or by agencies responsible for multiple systems Selected cases are reviewed and the plausibility of this hypothesis established

General recommendations are made for policy makers designing irrigation reform programs Capacity Building for Participatory Irrigation Management in Sind Province of Pakistan Yameen Memon, Mustafa Talpur, H. Murray-Rust, 2000 Based on a project in which IWMI assessed the training needs of the farmers under the Farmer Managed Irrigated Agriculture FMIA the study highlights the importance of training in areas such as effective communication strategies and conflict resolution equitable water distribution optimum use of water financial management and developing a business plan

Water, Technology and Development Martin Hvidt, 1998-12-31 Egyptian agriculture is uniquely dependent on water with over 95 per cent of agricultural production originating from land irrigated by the Nile The improvement of irrigation systems and better control over water by farmers is therefore crucial to the drive to raise productivity in the current context of scarce water resources rich but underutilized land and changes in the institutional environment of the economy after liberalization This text evaluates the ambitious state of the art Irrigation Improvement Project IIP and should be of interest to all those concerned with issues of water and development in the Middle East

Bureaucracy and Development Diana Suhardiman, 2014-12-26 The fall of the New Order government in 1998 and the political reform that followed posed substantial challenges for Indonesia's bureaucracy to continue fulfilling its mandate This book analyses the process of bureaucratic reform in the irrigation sector Using Irrigation Management Transfer policy as the entry point for analysis it documents and analyses the irrigation bureaucracy's ability to sustain its power and prominence in the sector's development amidst and against national and international pressures for reform The book argues that bureaucratic reform in the irrigation sector rather than attempting to change the bureaucracy's functioning in the image of national and global good governance perspectives and priorities should instead focus on linking the irrigation bureaucracy's everyday practice more effectively with farmers' needs and aspirations Reform efforts of the past decades show that Indonesia's irrigation sector development cannot be redirected without the irrigation bureaucracy's knowledge experience and cooperation and without strengthening its downward accountability to farmer irrigators

Juarez-Garcia,2025-07-31 This third edition of Arguing About Political Philosophy is the most complete up to date and interdisciplinary anthology of its kind Its selections cover classic philosophical sources such as those from Thomas Hobbes and John Rawls important works in political economy from thinkers like Adam Smith Friedrich Hayek and Karl Marx and the writing of cutting edge contemporary theorists like Debra Satz Jason Brennan and Ta Nehisi Coates The third edition has been substantially revised to make it more suitable for a growing number of courses in philosophy politics and economics PPE New topics and new readings help to explore the intersection of these three disciplines at a theoretical level and how they help us to think about challenging practical problems like regulating sweatshop labor reconciling immigration policy with social justice and thinking about the virtues and limits of democracy In addition to offering sections on foundational concepts political economy and contemporary debates in political philosophy the third edition contains a brand new section on political ideologies with a new introduction and accessible readings setting out the main features of liberalism socialism conservatism and libertarianism The updated Instructor and Student Resource website www.routledge.com/cw/zwolinski offers valuable resources for instructors and students alike including sample quizzes exams and writing assignments extensive study questions for each reading and an online version of the What's Your Political Philosophy self assessment Key Updates to the Third Edition Includes more interdisciplinary readings from economists and political scientists Contains readings that make the volume a better fit for new programs in philosophy politics and economics PPE Offers a better representation of diverse ideological perspectives Provides new coverage of emerging topics like reparations for past injustice sweatshop labor immigration policy effective altruism and the value of democracy Updates the important parts on the book's website sample quizzes exams and writing assignments extensive study questions for each reading and an online version of the What's Your Political Philosophy self assessment Beyond Collective Action Problems Atul Pokharel,2024-02-16 Human history is full of examples of continuously maintained shared infrastructure Our ability to survive and prosper depends on cooperation at some level from the irrigation systems that enabled ancient humans to abandon their nomadic lifestyle to the free and open source software that undergirds the internet Thus understanding the conditions under which community governance can be both equitable and sustainable is of critical importance to scholars and policymakers alike In Beyond Collective Action Problems Atul Pokharel argues that sustained cooperation depends on user perceptions that the cooperative arrangement is fair Pokharel elaborates a different way to think about sustained cooperation over decades based on a follow up of 233 long running community managed irrigation systems in Nepal the same cases that were used to understand how groups can overcome collective action problems Covering nearly forty years of history through these cases Pokharel introduces the idea of fairness problems to capture the many forms in which the perceived fairness of a form of governance comes to matter to continued cooperation As he shows the longer individuals cooperate the more they become aware of how far their cooperative arrangement has diverged from the initial promise of fairness This perception of fairness affects their commitment to maintaining the shared resource and participating in the institutions for governing it Highlighting why eventually perceived fairness matters to sustained cooperation this book illustrates how the fairness problem underlies successful cooperation over time making it necessary to look beyond collective action problems Managing Irrigation Together Clarence Maloney, K V Raju, 1994-10-31 Explores ways in which even small farmers can organize to manage irrigation Covers issues such as methods of field distribution environmental aspects and measurement of water costs and charges Includes a comparative analysis of irrigation policies in India Nepal and Sri Lanka and examples of successful farmers irrigation organizations in India Of interest to students and practitioners of irrigation management rural development and civil engineering Annotation copyright by Book News Inc Portland OR Agroecological Innovations Norman Uphoff, 2013-06-17 The world's food supply needs to rise significantly yet both arable and water supplies per capita are decreasing Not only are modern agricultural methods beyond the reach of those suffering the greatest food insecurity but they are also ecologically damaging relying upon fossil energy and chemical inputs This volume offers a collection of innovative and diverse approaches to agricultural development Documented in 12 case studies these approaches are reliant upon greater knowledge skill and labour input rather than larger capital expenditure They are shown to increase yield substantially sometimes doubling or tripling output This volume presents the concepts and operational means for reorienting agricultural efforts towards these more environmentally friendly and socially desirable approaches in the developed as well as developing world The Common Property Resource Digest, 1991

Flows and Practices Lyla Mehta, Bill Derman, 2017-05-19 For the past two decades Integrated Water Resources Management IWRM has been the dominant paradigm in water resources This book explores how ideas of IWRM are being translated and adapted in Mozambique South Africa Tanzania Uganda and Zimbabwe Grounded in social science theory and research it highlights the importance of politics history and culture in shaping water management practices and reform and demonstrates how Africa has clearly been a laboratory for IWRM While a new cadre of professionals made IWRM their mission we show that poor women and men may not have always benefitted In some cases IWRM has also offered a distraction from more critical issues such as water and land grabs privatisation the negative impacts of water permits and a range of institutional ambiguities that prevent water allocations to small and poor water users By critically examining the interpretations and challenges of IWRM the book contributes to improving water policies and practices and making them more locally appropriate in Africa and beyond On The Waterfront: Water Distribution, Technology And Agrarian Change In A South Indian Canal Irrigation System Peter P. Mollinga, 2003 Series Wageningen University Water Resources Series This book analyses the struggle over water in a large scale irrigation system in Raichur District Karnataka South India It looks at water control as a simultaneously technical managerial and socio political process The triangle of accommodation of different categories of farmers irrigation department officials and local politicians involving water votes money employment credit and harassment is documented The book shows that the physical infrastructure notably the division structures are signposts of struggle expressing the balance of power between farmers and the irrigation department and that between head and tail end farmers It concludes with a discussion of irrigation reform efforts in India reasons for the very slow transformation of the sector and how a more integrated perspective on irrigation could provide directions for the way forward
