Managing The Columbia River:

Managing the Columbia River National Research Council, Division on Earth and Life Studies, Board on Environmental Studies and Toxicology, Water Science and Technology Board, Committee on Water Resources Management, Instream Flows, and Salmon Survival in the Columbia River Basin, 2004-07-27 Flows of the Columbia River although modified substantially during the twentieth century still vary considerably between seasons and between years. Lowest flows tend to occur during summer months when demand for irrigation water is at its highest and when water temperatures are greatest. These periods of low flows, high demand, and high temperature are critical periods for juvenile salmon migrating downstream through the Columbia River hydropower system. Although impacts on salmon of any individual water withdrawal may be small, the cumulative effects of numerous withdrawals will affect Columbia River flows and would pose increased risks to salmon survival. The body of scientific knowledge explaining salmon migratory behavior and physiology is substantial but imperfect, and decision makers should acknowledge this and be willing to take action in the face of uncertainties. In order to provide a more comprehensive water permitting process, the State of Washington, Canada, other basin states, and tribal groups should establish a basin-wide forum to consider future water withdrawal applications. If the State of Washington issues additional permits for water withdrawals from the Columbia River, those permits should contain provisions that allow withdrawals to be curtailed during critical high demand periods. Columbia River Water Management Report, Columbia River Water Management Group, Columbia River Basin Water Resources Management Grants, 2007 Findings, Recommendations, and Elements of a Management Alternative for the Columbia River Gorge, Washington (State).
