Managing To Make It Urban Families And Adolescent Success:

Managing to Make It Frank F. Furstenberg, 1999-03-15 Challenging misconceptions about life in the inner city Managing to Make It shows that poor parenting is not necessarily more common in disadvantaged neighborhoods and explains why neighborhood advantaged is not invariably linked to success At the same time the study offers a wealth of information about programs services and policy decisions that will be indispensable to policy makers sociologists educators and anyone concerned with the fate of the urban poor

Managing to Make It Frank F. Furstenberg, Thomas D. Cook, Jacquelynne Eccles, Glen H. Elder Jr., 2000-12 One of the myths about families in inner city neighborhoods is that they are characterized by poor parenting Sociologist Frank Furstenberg and his colleagues explode this and other misconceptions about success parenting and socioeconomic advantage in Managing to Make It This unique study the first in the MacArthur Foundation Studies on Successful Adolescent Development series focuses on how and why youth are able to overcome social disadvantages Based on nearly 500 interviews and case studies of families in inner city Philadelphia Managing to Make It lays out in detail the creative means parents use to manage risks and opportunities in their communities More importantly it also depicts the strategies parents develop to steer their children away from risk and toward resources that foster positive development and lead to success Indispensable to anyone concerned about breaking the cycle of poverty and helplessness among at risk adolescents this book has a readable graphic style easily grasped by those unfamiliar with statistical techniques Library Journal

Adolescent Development and School Achievement in Urban Communities Gary Creasey, Patricia A. Families, Risk, and Competence Michael Lewis, Candice Feiring, 2014-04-04 The problems of studying families arise from the difficulty in studying systems where there are multiple elements interacting with each other and with the child How should this system be described Still other problems relate to indirect effects namely the influence of a particular dyad s interaction on the child when the child is not a member of the dyad While all agree that the mother father relationship has important bearing on the child s development exactly how to study this especially using observational techniques remains a problem While progress in studying the family has been slow there is no question that an increase in interest in the family systems as opposed to the mother child relationship is taking place This has resulted in an increase in research on families and their effects This volume by leading figures in child development on families attests to the growing sophistication of the conceptualization and measurement techniques for getting at family processes The third in a series that aims to address topics relevant to the developmental problems and developmental disabilities of retardation this volume is divided into two parts Section 1 presents basic family processes and approaches for describing family dynamics It deals with these issues from a broad perspective including studying families at dinner families in different cultural contexts and the understanding of family in nonhuman primates Section 2 looks at family processes in the service of studying families at risk The risk factors include poverty malnutrition and developmental delay and retardation The study of family processes in these contexts provides data on family dynamics as well as how these dynamics impact on the children s developing competence This volume will be informative for researchers clinicians and educators from a variety of disciplines and settings The editors aim is to bring a greater clarity to issues concerning the family life of children and highlight new research and possibilities for intervention

Family Life in Adolescence Patricia Noller, Sharon Atkin, 2014-01-01 Many parents fear the time when their beautiful happy children will become unmanageable adolescents continually engaging in risky or destructive behaviour Unfortunately this view of adolescents is the focus of the media even though it relates to just a small proportion of young people As the large amount of research we report shows most adolescents are responsible young people who care about their families and crave the support of their parents It is also true however as much research indicates that the quality of the relationship parents have with their adolescents is crucial to the wellbeing of those young people We discuss the need for parents to set reasonable limits on their adolescents and to expect appropriate behavior We also show on the basis of research that children who have experienced positive caring relationships with their parents are more likely than other adolescents to behave responsibly In other words behavior in adolescence does not come out of nowhere but builds on earlier experiences in the family Because of the large amount of research reported in this volume we expect that it will be useful to practitioners from a range of professions that are likely to focus on adolescents social workers youth leaders welfare workers religious leaders psychologists and psychiatrists and contribute to a better understanding of young people and their development and the importance of families to that development
