Evaluation of Man-computer Input Techniques for Military Information Systems Michael H. Strub, 1971 The publication describes the evaluation in terms of speed and accuracy of four configurations of procedures for inputting information into a semi automated information processing system Sixty USMA Prep School enlisted men were given an experimental task requiring each to translate 35 free text messages into computer acceptable terminology Accuracy and speed of two input procedures were each compared under two conditions of verification In one procedure the subjects translated the incoming message onto a paper format before transcribing on a CRT screen off line In the other procedure the message was transcribed directly on the CRT screen on line In the unverified condition one man performed the input operation without error check in the verified condition two men translated the same message compared their translations and resolved differences before entering the information into the data base Performance results under the four experimental conditions were also compared with a similar 7th Army TOS procedure in which a message is translated onto a paper format and the unverified message is copied on the CRT screen by the UIOD user input output device operator

StarBriefs 2001, 2012-12-06. This compilation probably looks like one of the craziest things a human being could spend his or her time on. Yet nobody would wonder at someone taking a short walk every day after twenty five years; that person would have covered a surprisingly long distance. This is exactly the story behind this list which appeared first as a few pages within the directory StarGuides or whatever name it had at that time and as a distinct sister publication since 1990. The idea behind this dictionary is to offer astronomers and related space scientists practical assistance in decoding the numerous abbreviations, acronyms, contractions and symbols which they might encounter in all aspects of the vast range of their professional activities including traveling. Perhaps it is a bit paradoxical but if scientists quickly grasp the meaning of an acronym solely in their own specific discipline they will probably encounter more difficulties when dealing with adjacent fields. It is for this purpose that this dictionary might be most often used. Scientists might also refer to this compilation in order to avoid identifying a project by an acronym which already has too many meanings or confused definitions.

StarBriefs Plus Andre Heck, 2004-03-31. With about 200 000 entries StarBriefs Plus represents the most comprehensive and accurately validated collection of abbreviations, acronyms, contractions and symbols within astronomy related space sciences and other related fields. As such this invaluable reference source and its companion volume StarGuides Plus should be on the reference shelf of every library organization or individual with any interest in these areas. Besides astronomy and associated space sciences related fields such as aeronautics, aeronomy, astronautics, atmospheric sciences, chemistry, communications computer sciences data processing education electronics engineering energetics environment geodesy geophysics information handling management mathematics meteorology optics physics remote sensing and so on are also covered when justified Terms in common use and or of general interest have also been included where appropriate
