

Critical Media Literacy and Transformative Learning

Drawing on Pop Culture and Entertainment Media in Teaching for Diversity in Adult Higher Education

Elizabeth J. Tisdell

Penn State University—Harrisburg

The media has a powerful influence on all of us, and has been discussed by critical media literacy scholars largely in K-12 settings. This article explores how, and to what extent, adult educators can draw on popular culture and entertainment media to develop critical media literacy and to facilitate transformative learning around diversity and equity issues, primarily in adult higher education classroom-based settings. It presents a cross-case analysis of the findings related to critical media literacy and transformative learning of three research studies of adult learners and the role of media in higher education around: the notion of pleasure, finding alternative narratives, expanded thinking about marginalized "Others" and hegemonic processes, and new insights through facilitated discussion.

Keywords: critical media literacy; transformative learning; diversity and equity; popular culture; critical pedagogy

The media and popular culture have an enormous influence on all of us. More people voted for the 2006 winner of "American Idol" than the winner of any presidential election (Leib, 2006). The average person in the United States watches 4 hours of television per day (Herr, 2001) and watching movies is a source of much entertainment worldwide. Indeed, entertainment media (as well as news and advertisement media) have an enormous effect, both consciously and unconsciously, on "what" we think and "how" we think—about ourselves and others, and about personal and social issues. As media education scholars have argued (Alvermann &

Author's Note: The author has done various presentations on Critical Media Literacy and Adult Education in the past few years, including at the Adult Education Research Conferences (AERC) in 2005, 2006, and 2007; she has never done any specifically about its relationship to transformative learning, though she did a beginning consideration of this article in October 2007 in Albuquerque, NM at the Transformative Learning Conference. Media Journal Reading And Writing About Pop Culture:

Media Journal Joseph D. Harris, Jay Rosen, Gary Calpas, 1999 In this book we ask students to do three things 1 To keep a media journal in which they reflect on the uses they make of the voices and images of popular culture 2 to read and respond to the work of other media critics to test their own views and experiences against those of the writers included in these pages and 3 to try their hands at writing media criticism themselves All three kinds of work ask students to find and write about texts from the media culture around them to think critically about what they see and hear on their television sets and radios in magazines and newspapers on city streets and shopping malls at the movies and at concerts and clubs To put it another way we believe that a book such as this can provide only some of the materials for a course on writing about popular culture that the remaining materials must always come from the media themselves and the experiences students have with them Our aim is not to inculcate students with a certain set of critical methods or terms or to introduce them to the academic study of popular culture but to offer them opportunities to rethink and write about their own experiences with the media to come to their own understandings of our common culture Media Journal Prentice Hall PTR, 1994-12-01 Media Journal

Joseph D. Harris, Jay Rosen, Gary Calpas, 1999-01-01 Connecting Disciplinary Literacy and Digital Storytelling in K-12 Education Haas, Leslie, Tussey, Jill, 2021-01-15 The idea of storytelling goes beyond the borders of language culture or traditional education and has historically been a tie that bonds families communities and nations Digital storytelling offers opportunities for authentic academic and non academic literacy learning across a multitude of genres It is easily accessible to most members of society and has the potential to transform the boundaries of traditional education As concepts around traditional literacy education evolve and become more culturally and linguistically relevant and responsive the connections between digital storytelling and disciplinary literacy warrant considered exploration Connecting Disciplinary Literacy and Digital Storytelling in K 12 Education develops a conceptual framework around pedagogical connections to digital storytelling within K 12 disciplinary literacy practices This essential reference book supports student success through the integration of digital storytelling across content areas and grade levels Covering topics that include immersive storytelling multiliteracies social justice and pedagogical storytelling it is intended for stakeholders interested in innovative K 12 disciplinary literacy skill development research and practices including but not limited to curriculum directors education faculty educational researchers instructional facilitators literacy professionals teachers pre service teachers professional development coordinators teacher preparation programs and students Popular Culture, New Media and Digital Literacy in Early Childhood Jackie Marsh, 2005 This book offers a range of perspectives on children s multimodal experiences providing a ground breaking account of the ways in which children engage with popular culture media and digital literacy practices from their earliest years Many young children have extensive experience of film television printed media computer games mobile phones and the Internet from birth yet their reaction to media texts is rarely acknowledged in the national curricula of any country This seminal text focuses on children from birth to eight years addressing issues such as media and identity construction media literacy practices in the home the changing nature of literacy in technologically advanced societies The place of popular and media texts in children s lives and the use of such texts in the curriculum By exploring children s engagement with popular culture media and digital texts in the home community and early years settings the contributors look at empirical studies from around the world and draw out vital new theoretical issues relating to children s emergent techno literacy practices With an unmatched team of international experts evaluating topics from text messaging to the Teletubbies this book is a long overdue fascinating and illuminating read for policy makers educational researchers and practitioners and crosses over to appeal to those in the linguistics field

New Media Literacies and Participatory Popular Culture Across Borders Bronwyn Williams, Amy A. Zenger, 2012 How do students online literacy practices intersect with online popular culture In this book scholars from a range of countries including Australia Lebanon Nepal Qatar South Africa Turkey and the United States illustrate and analyze how literacy practices that are mediated through and influenced by popular culture create both opportunities and tensions for secondary and university students The authors examine issues of theory identity and pedagogy as they address participatory popular culture sites such as fan forums video blogs social networking sites anime memes and comics and graphic novels Uniquely bringing together scholarship about online literacy practices and the growing body of work on participatory popular culture New Media Literacies and Participatory Popular Culture across Borders makes distinctive contributions to an emerging field of study pushing forward scholarship about literacy and identity in cross cultural situations and advancing important conversations about issues of global flows and local responses to popular culture

Gender and Popular Culture Kusha Tiwari, 2019-11-13 This collection of essays explores contemporary reflections on interactions between gender and culture The 11 contributions focus on varied dimensions of popular culture that define interpret validate interrogate and rupture gender conventions There are discussions on how children react to gender expectations and how this reaction is reflected in their activities like drawing and games There are also investigations of films female bodybuilding in the USA transgender identity in Greek and Indian mythology and women breaking glass ceilings and pioneering social movements in developing countries like India Specific chapters are devoted to British TV series and Hindi films that address issues related to masculinity Essays on challenges that women face in the corporate world and the real world of social inequalities especially in developing countries give this volume rich thematic diversity The collection will be of interest to literary critics film critics gender studies scholars and poets

Official Gazette Philippines, 2010 The World is a Text: Writing About Visual and Popular Culture Jonathan Silverman, Dean Rader, 2018-04-30 Wherever we look today popular culture greets us with texts that make implicit arguments this book helps students to think and write critically about these texts The World Is a Text teaches critical reading writing and argument in the context of pop culture and visual examples showing students how to read everyday objects and visual texts with basic semiotics The book shows how texts of all kinds from a painting to a university building to a pair of sneakers make complex arguments through their use of signs and symbols and shows students how to make these arguments in their own essays This new edition is rich with images real world examples writing and discussion prompts and examples of academic and student writing The first part of the book is a rhetoric covering argumentation research the writing process and adapting from high school to college writing while the second part explores writing about specific cultural topics Notes instruction and advice about research are woven into the text with research instruction closely tied to the topic being discussed New to the updated compact edition are chapters on fashion sports and nature and the environment
