Hickson (III.), 1993 Nonverbal Communication Across Disciplines: Culture, sensory interaction, speech, conversation Fernando Poyatos, 2002 In a progressive and systematic approach to communication and always through an interdisciplinary and cross cultural perspective this first volume presents culture as an intricate grid of sensible and intelligible sign systems in space and time identifying the semiotic and interactive problems inherent in intercultural and subcultural communication according to verbal nonverbal cultural fluency The author lays out fascinating complexity of our direct and synesthesis sensory perception of people and artifactual and environmental elements and its audible and visual manifestations through our speaking face to then acknowledge the triple reality of discourse as verbal language paralanguage kinesics which is applied through two realistic models a for a verbal nonverbal comprehensive transcription of interactive speech and b for the implementation of nonverbal communication in foreign language teaching The author presents his exhaustive model of nonverbal categories for a detailed analysis of normal or pathological behaviors in any interactive or noninteractive manifestation and based on all the previous material his equally exhaustive structural model for the study of conversational encounters which suggests many applications in different fields such as the intercultural and multisystem communication situation developed in simultaneous or consecutive interpreting 956 literary quotations from 103 authors and 194 works illustrate all the points discussed An Integrated Approach to Communication Theory and Research Don W. Vocate, 2012-12-06 Intrapersonal communication is a relatively new phenomenon for communication study and still lacks the grounding of a sound theoretical base The first to present a developed theory of this discipline this book's goal is to provide graduate students and professionals with an organized point of departure for their research The theoretical section begins with an intrapersonal communication theory derived from the sociogenetic views of George Herbert Mead and L S Vygotsky This theory emphasizes social interaction the developmental nature of mind and the crucial role of speech in creating a self a culture and a mind which then interact in human intrapersonal communication This section also provides the reader with a coherent interdisciplinary knowledge base taken from speech communication biology neurology cultural psychology anthropology sociology speech pathology and linguistics The integrated theoretical perspective that results makes the study compatible with communication scholarship focusing on the social cultural cognitive or performance aspects of communication phenomena The applications section examines neurophysiological intrapersonal communication research methods and studies to date together with specific applications of intrapersonal communication theory to childhood language acquisition to the establishment of gender identities and to intrapersonal competence The final chapter presents pedagogical guidance on how we can influence intrapersonal competence and performance as well as commenting on the current state of this study and its future prospects The editor's interstitial commentary facilitates access by readers wishing to construct their own theory

Nonverbal Communication Patrick W. Miller, 1988 Based on the premise that effective teaching depends on successful communication this booklet discusses the nonverbal dimension of communication The booklet contends that humans use nonverbal communications for the following reasons 1 words have limitations 2 nonverbal signals are powerful 3 nonverbal messages are likely to be more genuine 4 nonverbal signals can express feelings too disturbing to state and 5 a separate communication channel is necessary to help send complex messages The booklet argues that teachers should be aware of nonverbal communication in the classroom to become better receivers of student messages and to gain the ability to send students positive signals that reinforce learning and at the same time become more adept at avoiding negative signals that stifle learning Several significant research highlights are presented and various areas of nonverbal expression are treated including facial expressions eyes vocal intonation touching body postures and movements dress and use of space The conclusion of the booklet maintains that if effective communication is to be achieved in today's schools it must be as an open process where teachers and students possess the ability to send and receive messages accurately A table is included and 181 references are appended MS Applications of Nonverbal Communication Ronald E.
