The Art of the Dresden Gallery Julia de Wolf Addison, 2016-09-17 Excerpt from The Art of the Dresden Gallery Notes and Observations Upon the Old and Modern Masters and Paintings in the Royal Collection As from any other One cannot claim that there is no padding of course there is the usual proportion of indifferent work But even such pictures seem to have their place if we agree with Philip III Of Spain One of the Dukes in his suite suggested to his Majesty that it would be well to prohibit poor painters from launching their daubs upon the world Bear with them replied the king for the sake of their laudable love for art and also because a bad picture pleases some people as well as a good one This is a little broader stand than we should wish to recommend but it calls attention to the important fact that the spirit of the time determines the standard of art and it is unfair to judge the best work of some men too harshly because the sentiment of their day by which they were guided is different from the spirit by which we determine the art standard of today To enjoy pictures it is necessary to develop enough imagination to enable us To enter into the atmosphere of the centuries in which they were produced About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged
