Abstract

Case Studies were employed by Harvard University, Cranfield University, Thunderbird University MBA programs. It is also a good practice to use case studies for undergraduate degree programs. For PhD candidates, it is mandatory that they do quantitative or qualitative research for real world case studies. But there were few case studies in the literature for Big Data, C#, Java, Environment, Global E-Commerce and Sales Management.

Big Data and C# were for professionals at IEEE. Environment course was an undergraduate course at University of Phoenix (UOP). In addition, this author is mentoring 11 online UOP Doctoral Candidates. Java course was for Master Degree students at New Jersey Institute Technology. At Dominican College, Global E-Commerce was for undergraduates. Sales Management was offered at Economics University Prague, Master Degree students in International Business.

Doing Case Studies in these courses, for undergraduates, Master degrees, PhDs, provided a sound foundation for critical thinking, leadership, public speaking and team building skills. Student reviews were good to excellent. This paper gives the summary.

Keyword: Big Data, C#, Java, Environment, Global E-Commerce, Sales Management, PhD Mentoring, and Real-World Case Studies
