Roots In The African Dust Sustaining The Drylands:

Roots in the African Dust Michael Mortimore, 1998-09-17 The image of Africa in the modern world has come to be shaped by perceptions of the drylands and their problems of poverty drought degradation and famine Michael Mortimore offers an alternative and revisionist thesis dismissing on theoretical and empirical grounds the conventional view of runaway desertification driven by population growth and inappropriate land use In its place he suggests a more optimistic model of sustainable land use based on researched case studies from East and West Africa where indigenous technological adaptation has put population growth and market opportunities to advantage He also proposes a more appropriate set of policy priorities to support dryland peoples in their efforts to sustain land and livelihoods The result is a remarkably clear synthesis of much of the best work that has emerged over past years

Rural-Urban Interaction in the Developing World Kenny Lynch, 2004-11-10 Sustaining the rural and urban populations of the developing world has been identified as a key global challenge for the twenty first century Rural Urban Interaction in the Developing World is an introduction to the relationships between rural and urban places in the developing world and shows that not all their aspects are as obvious as migration from country to city There is now a growing realization that rural urban relations are far more complex Using a wealth of student friendly features including boxed case studies discussion questions and annotated guides to further reading this innovative book places rural urban interactions within a broader context thus promoting a clearer understanding of the opportunities as well as the challenges that rural urban interactions represent

Population and Development W.T.S. Gould, 2008-11-19 Population and Development addresses important issues at the heart of the problems of developing countries How these countries address the common difficulties of population growth including mortality and fertility decline population redistribution including internal migration and urbanization and also international migration for both source countries and for destination countries How and why has population change affected development both positively and negatively How and why has development affected population change both growth and distribution The book opens with an introduction preceding the ten substantive chapters covering some of the broader issues for population studies and development studies and the relationships between them The first three chapters set out the main concepts and theoretical discussions on how population affects development and also how development affects population Detailed chapters then cover each of the three main components of population change fertility mortality and finally migration These are followed by chapters on the impacts of age structures including the potential for a demographic dividend and of the more qualitative aspects of human resource development through formal education and ICTs with further chapters on population policies and population futures The book incorporates illustrative text boxes and case studies on regions in Africa the Middle East and Asia which elaborate the broader theoretical and conceptual substance of the ten major chapters Each chapter has Discussion Questions and Sources and Further Reading sections and there is an extensive integrated References section The arguments of the book bring together a large but fairly loosely integrated literature from population studies development studies and geography in a conceptually coordinated empirically wide ranging and challenging discussion It is targeted at an audience in undergraduate courses in Geography and in Masters courses in Development Studies and Population Studies The books succinct but erudite structure means it can be used either as a course text book or as a basic reference on a range of current issues and likely concerns at the interface between Geography Development Studies and Population Studies
