Metacognition And Reading Comprehension:

Metacognition and Reading Comprehension Ruth Garner, 1987 Developmental psychologists have been interested in metacognitive phenomena since the early 1970s while reading researchers have been interested in awareness monitoring and strategy use for text processing as part of a shift in focus from text factors to reader factors in reading A great many research studies have been conducted by psychologists and reading researchers under the rubric of metacognition Unlike other chapters from some edited books which present only syntheses of this burgeoning research literature this volume not only presents the literature but provides analysis about its usefulness for researchers and practitioners It also presents a discussion of important methodological dilemmas within these research literatures Improving Reading Comprehension through Metacognitive Reading Strategies Instruction Kouider Mokhtari, 2016-11-02 This book addresses the need to help all students including English learners improve their ability to read with understanding so that they can succeed not just in their language and literacy classes but also in their subject area classrooms The book brings together a group of experts representing the fields of first and second language reading whose chapters contribute in different yet complementary ways to the goal of this book Improve students reading for understanding across languages with metacognitive awareness and use of reading strategies instruction Cognition, Metacognition, and Reading Donna-Lynn Forrest-Pressley, T. Gary Waller, 2013-03-12 We had our first conversation about cognition metacognition and reading in September of 1976 Our particular concern was with reading and learning to read and what if anything meta cognition might have to do with it all We didn't really know much about metacognition then of course but then most other people were in the same predicament Some people had been working with interesting approaches and results on metalanguage and reading among them J Downing L Ehri L Gleitman M Mattingly and E Ryan and it also was about that time that people were becoming aware of E Markman's first studies of comprehension monitoring Other than that perhaps the most influential item around was the perhaps already classic monograph by Kruetzer Leonard and Flavell on what children know about their own memory Also in the air at that time were things like A Brown's notions about knowing knowing about knowing and knowing how to know D Meichenbaum's ideas about cognitive behavior modification and the work by A Brown and S Smiley on the awareness of important units in text Even though these developments were cited as new and innovative it was not the case that psychologists had never before been of questions They certainly interested in or concerned with metacognitive sorts had as clearly evidenced by the notion of metaplans in Miller Galanter and Pribram's Plans and the Structure of Behavior Metacognition in Literacy Learning Susan E. Israel, Cathy Collins Block, Kathryn L. Bauserman, Kathryn Kinnucan-Welsch, 2006-06-17 This volume provides the first comprehensive research based examination of metacognition in literacy learning Bringing together research findings from reading linguistics psychology and education it is logically organized as follows Part I provides the theoretical foundation that supports the teaching of metacognition Parts II and III provide new methods for metacognitive assessment and instruction in literacy contexts at all grade levels and Part IV provides new information on integrating metacognition into professional development programs Key features include Chapter Structure Teacher reflections at the beginning of each chapter illustrate teacher thinking about the chapter topic and metacognitive connections at the end of each chapter link its content with that of the preceding and following chapters Contributor Expertise Few volumes can boast of a more luminous cast of contributing authors see table of contents Comprehensiveness Twenty chapters organized into four sections plus a summarizing chapter make this the primary reference work in the field of literacy based metacognition This volume is appropriate for reading researchers professional development audiences and for upper level undergraduate and graduate level courses in reading and educational psychology Metacognition in Learning and Instruction Hope J. Hartman, 2013-06-29 Contributions by leading experts and others to understanding the crucial role of metacognition in relation to broad areas of education make this collection a uniquely stimulating book It encompasses metacognition in both the neglected area of teaching and the more well established area of learning The twelve chapters contribute to our understanding of the construct of metacognition and to its role in both teaching and learning It addresses domain general and domain specific aspects of metacognition including applications to the particular subjects of reading speaking mathematics and science It is organized into four major sections which address metacognition in relation to students learning motivation and culture and to teachers metacognition about instruction This collection spans theory research and practice related to metacognition in education at all school levels from elementary through university Dr Robert J Sternberg IBM Professor of Psychology at Yale University is the discussant Metacognition in Reading Comprehension Strategies Elaine Marie Gavette, 2001 Reading for Understanding Ulla-Britt Persson, 1994 A book length study described the metacognitive components of good and poor reading ability with special reference to comprehension Subjects were 53 Swedish students in grade 5 or 8 and were either good or poor comprehenders as defined by a combination of a reading test and teacher ratings Data collection consisted of semi structured interviews and the recall of three texts with different structures Results indicated that 1 good readers organized their knowledge and used it appropriately 2 good readers cognitive and metacognitive abilities were well integrated whereas the pattern of functions in poor readers seemed distorted 3 poor readers were less confident than good readers they regarded themselves as poor learners and their verbal responses were less elaborate 4 poor readers decoding was often not automatic leaving less capacity for comprehension 5 the gap between good and poor readers widened from grade 5 to grade 8 as more independent reading was expected of students and 6 the younger students believed they would improve the older students lost interest in studies Findings suggest that poor and good readers differ in the way they process text information and monitor their cognitive functions Contains over 200 references in addition to 19 tables and 5 figures of data Appendixes present the interview questionnaire examples of categorizations the texts and sample student responses rs Metacognitive Prompts Barbara N. Boschert, 2018 This study sought to determine using a paired samples t test if the instruction intervention in using metacognitive prompts improved metacognitive awareness and reading comprehension. Students many having academically at risk ACT scores from sections of a reading based class at a rural Mississippi community college participated in a pretest reading using prompts to identify their thinking an ACT Compass reading test instructional intervention sessions on using annotating and metacognitive prompts to aid comprehension a posttest on a more difficult reading using metacognitive prompts and another ACT Compass reading test schools were assigned to four training conditions read reread self questioning and underlining self questioning only and underlining only Training was conducted in small groups of four or five over a sequence of 5 half hour sessions In each of the first four sessions subjects were trained to read short passages employing their respective techniques and then completed a comprehension test In the last session subjects were required to complete a comprehension test without being instructed what technique to employ when reading the passage thus providing a measure of transfer of learning Data from the last three sessions a comprehension a recall and a transfer score respectively were analysed using a 2 subject group x 4 training condition x 4 school x 3 testing repeated measures ANOVA Results indicated significant subject group x training condition subject group x testing training condition x testing and training condition x school interactions The subject group x training condition interaction revealed that the LD children were inferior to the regular children only in the read reread control
