Making Sense of Health, Disease, and the Environment in Cross-Cultural History: The Arabic-Islamic World, China, Europe, and North America Florence Bretelle-Establet, Marie Gaille, Mehrnaz Katouzian-Safadi, 2020-01-01 This book has been defined around three important issues the first sheds light on how people in various philosophical religious and political contexts understand the natural environment and how the relationship between the environment and the body is perceived the second focuses on the perceptions that a particular natural environment is good or bad for human health and examines the reasons behind such characterizations the third examines the promotion in history of specific practices to take advantage of the health benefits or avoid the harm caused by certain environments and also efforts made to change environments supposed to be harmful to human health The feeling and or the observation that the natural environment can have effects on human health have been and are still commonly shared throughout the world This led us to raise the issue of the links observed and believed to exist between human beings and the natural environment in a broad chronological and geographical framework In this investigation we bring the reader from ancient and late imperial China to the medieval Arab world up to medieval modern and contemporary Europe This book does not examine these relationships through the prism of the knowledge of our modern contemporary European experience which still too often leads to the feeling of totally different worlds Rather it questions protagonists who in different times and in different places have reflected on their own terms on the links between environment and health and tries to obtain a better understanding of why these links took the form they did in these precise contexts This book targets an academic readership as well as an informed audience for whom present issues of environment and health can be nourished by the reflections of the past

Mirror Facts Amelia Khatri,AI,2025-02-18 Mirror Facts explores the surprising intersection of science history and culture found in the everyday object of the mirror It examines not only the physics of how mirrors reflect light based on principles of optics and material science but also how mirror technology has evolved from early polished stones found in archaeological findings to the high tech reflective surfaces we use today Did you know that the development of silvering techniques was a pivotal moment in creating clearer more effective mirrors The book traces a logical progression starting with the fundamental laws of reflection and then moving through a chronological history of mirrors across civilizations. It shows how these reflective surfaces have been imbued with cultural symbolism appearing in art, literature, and even mythology. Exploring this cultural symbolism highlights the fascinating ways different societies view mirrors, from tools for self-reflection to portals in folklore. Mirror Facts takes a unique approach by blending scientific accuracy with historical context and cultural insights. By connecting optics, material science, and art history, the book offers a comprehensive view that will appeal to anyone curious about the hidden stories behind common objects.

Intergenerational Communication Across the Life Span Angie Williams, Jon F. Nussbaum, 2013-02-01. Individuals of all ages interact with one another, and their interactions have significance throughout their lives. This distinctive volume acknowledges the importance of these interactions and provides a life-span developmental view of communication and aging, attempting to capture the many similarities and changes that occur in people's lives as they age. The authors move the study of intergenerational contact closer to the actual participants, examining what happens within intergenerational interactions and how people evaluate their intergenerational experiences. The volume concentrates on the micro context of the intergenerational interaction and the cognitions, language, and relationship behaviors related to intergenerational communication across the life span. The volume employs the perspective that the understanding of human behavior across the life span is enhanced by studying communicative behavior in intergenerational interaction. The authors integrate research from multiple disciplines concerned with intergenerational communication, which is framed by several unique theoretical perspectives drawn from the communication discipline. As a resource for the study of intergenerational communication across the life span, this monograph offers important insights to scholars, students, and all who are involved in intergenerational communication.

An Integrated Approach to Intercultural Communication Nataša Bakić-Mirić, 2011-11-15. This book explores communication culture and intercultural communication. The emphasis is on promoting understanding of and appreciation for the rich and varied perspectives encountered in intercultural communication opportunities. Interdisciplinary in nature, the book focuses on the need to develop self-understanding as a first step to intercultural understanding and highlights the need for the intercultural state of mind to match our multicultural world. The difficulties inherent in the quest of such an objective, the excitement of challenges on the way, and the rewards of the success that are sputtering with new energy and yet waiting to be discovered. Furthermore, the book represents an initial step in the process of building competencies which may facilitate effective communication in all types of cross-cultural settings. It gives a unique outlook of how people from differing cultural backgrounds communicate in similar and different ways among themselves and how they endeavor to communicate across cultures. The book grows out of the philosophy that developing better interpersonal intercultural communication skills will profoundly benefit the seven billion people who share this planet and who increasingly interact with each other by producing some guidelines with which people can successfully
