APA Handbook of Multicultural Psychology: Theory and research Frederick T. L. Leong, 2014 The term multicultural psychology has become commonplace in our field during the past decade nevertheless it is essential that I start with a discussion of what multicultural means in this handbook In the United States multicultural psychology has referred to both international and domestic multiculturalism with the former usually labeled as cross cultural psychology and cultural psychology and the latter as racial and ethnic minority psychology In an article seeking to integrate cross cultural psychology research methods into ethnic minority psychology Leong Leung and Cheung 2010 proposed that advances in both fields would be facilitated if there was greater cross fertilization especially in methodological approaches because proponents in both fields are interested in studying and understanding the role and impact of culture on human behavior Leong et al noted that two separate and distinct disciplines underlie the field of multicultural psychology Cross cultural psychology and cultural psychology have been influenced much more by anthropology and cross national studies of human behavior with a heavy emphasis on social psychological analyses Racial and ethnic minority psychology has been influenced much more by sociology and concerns with social stratification and social opportunities for national subgroups Within the APA the latter is represented by Division 45 Society for the Psychological Study of Ethnic Minority Issues whereas the former is represented by Division 52 International Psychology Each has a separate history separate associations and separate scientific journals i e Cultural Diversity and Ethnic Minority Psychology and the Journal of Cross Cultural Psychology and conventions and each subscribes to different philosophical orientations Cross cultural psychology has had a longer interest in methodological and measurement challenges whereas racial and ethnic minority psychology is more oriented toward political advocacy and social justice and social change Introduction PsycINFO Database Record c 2013 APA all rights reserved

Multicultural Psychology Jeffery Scott Mio, Lori A. Barker, Melanie M. Domenech Rodríguez, John Gonzalez, 2023

Throughout the years that we have taught courses on multicultural psychology and attended conference presentations and workshops on this topic what has stuck with us are the stories people felt compelled to tell In fact the genesis of this book was a student's reaction paper that was so moving we felt it had to be published Thus we planned this book around stories narratives or anecdotes that illustrate important aspects of scientific studies and other professional writings in the field of multicultural psychology The personal stories from our students have generally not been edited for grammar although some markedly ungrammatical phrases and sentences were modified to make them a bit more grammatical We did this to maintain the flavor of their stories from the heart which seemed to illustrate the academic points we are trying to make In general science tells us that anecdotes are not sufficient evidence to prove one's point Although we agree with that stance from a scientific perspective and do not substitute anecdotes for scientific investigation we do use anecdotes as central points around which to build our case for multicultural issues based on science In addition multicultural psychology emphasizes the value of integrating quantitative and qualitative methods to accurately capture the richness of diverse cultures and communities Thus rather than substituting for science our anecdotes are prototypes for scientific investigation For example science tells us that there are differences in the way in which men and women communicate We illustrate those differences by presenting anecdotes highlighting the common experience women have of sometimes being shut out of conversations particularly ones that are about male topics Science tells us that there are various stages or statuses of racial identity and we present some prototypical anecdotes that illustrate how those statuses of racial identity affect one's perceptions and life experiences Science tells us that clients of color now referred to as BIPOC for Black Indigenous and People of Color may have very different reactions to European American therapists and we present an anecdote that conveys a typical reaction to a European American therapist who did not approach a BIPOC family of color in a culturally sensitive manner Again these stories are meant not to replace science but to enrich science to add texture to the clean and sometimes sterile lines of science
