LINCOLN CONSOLIDATED

The Lincoln Consolidated Training School was formed by the union of thirteen ordinary rural school districts. The consolidated district covers an area of sixty-three square miles and has a property valuation of approximately three million dollars. The building was erected by a bond issue voted by the people of the district. The faculty consisting of thirty unusually well trained teachers is supplied by the Normal College. In addition to the ordinary subjects taught in the average school, home economics, agriculture, music, art, manual training, physical training, and commercial subjects are offered. The school is attended by more than six hundred children, all of whom come from the farms.
