10% In study III patients expressed different experiences of and preferences for communication about their HF prognosis Many patients described that the health care professionals had not provided them with any prognosis information at all The patients had different understandings of HF as a chronic illness which had an impact on their preferences for communication about their prognosis III The simulation training described in the ethnographic study IV was part of an end of life care simulation during the last term of the 3 year bachelor degree level nursing education program where students learn and practice basic palliative care The students felt that the simulation training was a good opportunity to practice handling end of life situations as it gave them a chance to experience this situation and their own feelings and thoughts on death and dying In study V an intervention to improve communication about prognosis and end of life care in HF care was developed and some areas were feasibility tested Heart failure patients their families and health care professionals working in HF care or palliative care participated in the development process Health care professionals nurses and physicians participated in the following feasibility testing of the intervention Conclusions This thesis shows that prognosis and end of life care are seldom discussed with HF patients in Swedish and Dutch heart failure care and that many heart failure nurses have ambiguous attitudes towards discussing these topics with patients and their families I II The patients described that they receive different messages concerning their heart failure and that they also have different preferences for discussing the heart failure trajectory with health care professionals The professionals need to understand the impact of heart failure on each patient and adapt the communication to each individual III End of life care simulation with skilled supervisors shows great promise for health care professionals to learn good communication skills in end of life care conversations IV A Question Prompt List and a communication course might be useful for improving communication about the heart failure trajectory in patients their families and health care professionals

From the Heart Jeffrey L. Kosky, 2025-02-25 What does it mean to have a heart? How does it feel when a heart fails, and what does it take to recover? In a world beset by never-ending crises, personal and collective, local and global, is heartlessness the only option? From the Heart weaves together a personal narrative of a life-threatening ailment with considerations of philosophy, art, and science to contemplate ultimate questions: matters of life and death. Jeffrey L. Kosky recounts his brush with death, the surgical repair of a congenital defect in his aortic valve, his gradual recovery of everyday life, and his struggle to find the heart to go on throughout it all. To make sense of the experience, he immerses himself in humanistic inquiry and medical science, the histories of medicine, cardiac surgery, and knowledge of the human heart, as well as the works of artists, writers, philosophers, and theologians. Writing about the experience of being human from the precarious position of his own woundedness, Kosky shares hard-earned perspectives on what matters most. Combining moving memoir encounters with major authors and artists and heartfelt reflections on the big questions of existence, this elegantly written book is at once erudite and powerful. It shows us why the heart, in physical, emotional, and metaphorical senses, helps us come to terms with sickness and health, dying and living.

Questions Concerning Aristotle's On Animals (The Fathers of the Church, Mediaeval Continuation, Volume 9)

Albertus, 2008 After the Latin translation of Aristotelian works outside the logica vetus began in earnest in the twelfth century, Spain it remained to Scholastic philosophers to assimilate the new materials. Although many individuals commented on the logica nova and on some of Aristotle's books on natural philosophy, Albert the Great is one of only a very few Scholastics to comment on the entire collection of Aristotle's biological works. This text, the Questions concerning Aristotle's On Animals (Quaestiones super de animalibus), recovered only at the beginning of the twentieth century and never before translated in its entirety, represents Conrad of Austria's report on a series of disputed questions that Albert the Great addressed in Cologne ca. 1258. The Questions in nineteen books mixes two distinct genres: the scholastic quaestio with arguments pro et contra a determination and answers to the objections, and the straightforward question and response found for example in the Prose Salernitan Questions. Here, even more clearly perhaps than in his slightly later and much larger paraphrastic commentary On Animals (De animalibus), Albert adduces his own views, often criticizing other medieval physicians and natural philosophers on comparative anatomy, human physiology, sexuality, procreation, and embryology. This translation, based on the critical edition that appeared in the Cologne edition of Albert's work, helps to explain the title patron saint of scientists bestowed upon Albert by Pope Pius XII. This work should find its audience among medievalists and historians of science and culture. More so than the massive On Animals it should prove useful in the classroom as an encyclopedia or handbook of medieval life ABOUT THE TRANSLATORS Irven M Resnick is professor of philosophy and religion and Chair of Excellence in Judaic Studies at the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga Kenneth F Kitchell Jr is professor of classics at the University of Massachusetts Amherst
