Professor Pangloss a name that rang a bell for him recalling Voltaire's famous novel Candide and the course turned out to be very useful albeit puzzling at times which therefore troubled Sam quite a lot so much so that he had to share his critical thinking problems with Amy even when she was already away from the UK holidaying at her aunt's invitation in Hong Kong. The lovers separated by at least six thousand miles carried on their intimate communication using state of the art IT frequently disturbing each other on account of a considerable difference in time each waking up the other in the small hours. Amy obviously enjoying herself in Hong Kong and meeting up with old friends and going to scenic places did not forget her love's academic problems. Indeed she went out of her way to find answers for his puzzles even going so far as to start a really lengthy discussion with her friends and new acquaintances in what is Hong Kong's most popular hideout the Amigo Caf in Happy Valley. Back in London Sam strangely enough loitered around and ended up in front of what he perceived as a Sherlock Holmes Shop where he was greeted by a very friendly and lovely young employee who processed his application for membership to a strange sort of society the Sherlockesque Detective Clique. At the next clique meeting that Sam participated in he found delight and insight for his appreciation of critical thinking which he at once told Amy about on the phone of course and again in the small hours. Home at last Amy told Sam about her lengthy and very revealing discussion with her friends in the Chinese Restaurant in Hong Kong's International Airport. Sam found that very illuminating and both then appreciated critical thinking so much more than before. In the West End surprisingly Sam saw that bohemian looking cheater and challenged him to pay for the meal that he consumed in that Italian Restaurant upon which this man produced a dagger instead of a bank note. Recalling the last of the Thirty-six Stratagems Sam and Amy let that hooligan go reserving for themselves the peace of mind so that all's well should end well.
