Professional Playwrights Ira Clark, 2021-12-14 The most neglected of the English Renaissance playwrights are the major Carolines Philip Massinger John Ford James Shirley and Richard Brome Writing in the 1620s and 1630s always in the shadow of their great precursors Shakespeare and Jonson they have often been dubbed mere purveyors of slick escapist sensationalism who avoided the great issues of their day and turned away from the impending breakdown of English society Ira Clark's revisionist book shows us these dramatists and their time whole particularly through analysis of their treatment of sociopolitical issues issues that find echoes in twentieth century concerns For each of these playwrights Clark sketches his known social circle describes characteristic social and political stances and dramatic techniques and provides a detailed reading of an exemplary play In considering their artistry he notes their variations on traditional dramatic characters situations and styles Where their predecessors had offered deep psychological portrayals the Carolines he finds present characters whose roles grow out of their social relations The issues they engage range from the sovereignty of King or Parliament and the criteria for social mobility to parental dominion and the rights of women and children Their presentations range from conservatism Ford's distilled and Shirley's playful through Massinger's accommodation to Brome's extemporaneous experimentation The Carolines theatrical world Clark argues is accessible to modern readers through the social theories of our time which depend on their world as a stage trope for such concepts as symbolic interactionism and the ritual inculcation of social cohesion This important book sheds new light on both the artistic and the political climate of seventeenth century England

Witness to Reconstruction Kathleen Diffley, 2011-07-18 In the wake of the Civil War Constance Fenimore Woolson became one of the first northern observers to linger in the defeated states from Virginia to Florida Born in New Hampshire in 1840 and raised in Ohio she was the grandniece of James Fenimore Cooper and was gaining success as a writer when she departed in 1873 for St Augustine During the next six years she made her way across the South and reported what she saw first in illustrated travel accounts and then in the poetry stories and serialized novels that brought unsettled social relations to the pages of Harper's Monthly the Atlantic Scribner's Monthly Appleton's Journal and the Galaxy In the midst of Reconstruction and in print for years to come Woolson revealed the sharp edges of loss the sharper summons of opportunity and the entanglements of northern misperceptions a decade before the waves of well heeled tourists arrived during the 1880s This volume's sixteen essays are intent on illuminating through her example the neglected world of Reconstruction's backwaters in literary developments that were politically charged and genuinely unpredictable Drawing upon the postcolonial and transnational perspectives of New Southern Studies as well as the cultural history intellectual genealogy and feminist priorities that lend urgency to the portraits of the global South this collection investigates the mysterious ravaged territory of a defeated nation as curious northern readers first saw it

The English Novel, Vol I Richard W. F. Kroll,2014-07-21 The English Novel Volume I 1700 to Fielding collects a series of previously published essays on the early eighteenth century novel in a single volume reflecting the proliferation of theoretical approaches since the 1970s The novel has been the object of some of the most exciting and important critical speculations and the eighteenth century novel has been at the centre of new approaches both to the novel and to the period between 1700 and 1750 Richard Kroll's introduction seeks to frame the contributions by reference to the most significant critical discussions These include the question of whether and how we can talk about the rise of the novel the vexed question of what might constitute a novel the relationship between the novel and possibly competing genres such as history or the romance the relationship between early male writers like Defoe and popular novels by women in the early eighteenth century the general ideological role played by novels relative to eighteenth century culture are they means of ideological conscription or liberation poststructuralist analyses of identity and gender and the emergence of sentimental and domestic codes after Richardson Since the modern European novel is often thought to have been formed in this period these debates have clear implications for students of the novel in general as well as for those interested in the early enlightenment Headnotes place each essay within the map of these wider concerns and the volume offers a useful further reading list Taken as a whole this collection encapsulates the state of criticism at the present moment Detecting Women Philippa Gates, 2011-04-22
