Six Women Who Shaped What Americans Eat Michelle Mart, 2025-07-15 Six Women Who Shaped What Americans Eat tells the story of how food choice in modern America has been influenced by culture industrial abundance and health narratives Mart reflects on the careers of six women to illustrate the varied and overlapping influences on food choice Each of these women had a substantial impact on American cuisine attitudes toward food and what people chose to eat. They highlighted the politics of food, the pleasure of food, the connection between food and health, and the environmental harm of poor food choices. Part one of the book discusses the bounties of the modern American food system and covers Hazel Stiebeling, Poppy Cannon, and Julia Child. Stiebeling was a chemist and government nutritionist beginning in the 1930s and shaped dietary guidelines and school lunches that affected generations of Americans. Cannon, a best-selling cookbook author and newspaper columnist, gained fame in the 1950s by preaching the wonders of processed food. Child, another cookbook author and television personality starting in the 1960s, celebrated French cuisine and made it accessible to American cooks and palates. Part two examines the hidden costs of abundance and covers Frances Moore Lappé, Marion Nestle, and Alice Waters. Lappé was an author and activist concerned with the environmental impact of food in the late 20th century and who is credited with bringing vegetarianism into the mainstream. Nestle was an academic nutritionist, government consultant, and author who decried the undue influence of food corporations. Waters, a celebrity chef, restaurateur, and food activist, became a symbol of alternative food movements in the 21st century.

Provided by publisher Mexican-American Plain Cooking Bruce Kraig, 1982 The Malthusian Moment Thomas Robertson, 2012-05-07 Although Rachel Carson's Silent Spring 1962 is often cited as the founding text of the U.S. environmental movement, in The Malthusian Moment Thomas Robertson locates the origins of modern American environmentalism in twentieth-century adaptations of Thomas Malthus's concerns about population growth. For many environmentalists, managing population growth became the key to unlocking the most intractable problems facing Americans after World War II: everything from war and the spread of communism overseas to poverty, race riots, and suburban sprawl at home. Weaving together the international and the domestic in creative new ways, The Malthusian Moment charts the explosion of Malthusian thinking in the United States from World War I to Earth Day 1970, then traces the just as surprising decline in concern beginning in the mid-1970s. In addition to offering an unconventional look at World War II and the Cold War through a balanced study of the environmental movement's most contentious theory, the book sheds new light on some of the big stories of postwar American life: the rise of consumption, the growth of the federal government, urban and suburban problems, the civil rights and women's movements, the role of scientists in a democracy, new attitudes about sex and sexuality, and the emergence of the New Right.

Food Stars Ellen Mahoney, 2022-10-18 Food is a great unifying force on Earth. Not only do humans need food to survive, it also gives structure to our days, offers dining and recreational opportunities, provides employment, and speaks to important societal issues such as food security, hunger, and nutrition. Women and food make a dynamic duo. These 15 hardworking, innovative, and accomplished women have made great strides in the field of food, whether it's coming up with meals for astronauts to eat in space, operating a 20-acre farm, hosting a food podcast, or fighting for food rights. Women have always been instrumental in providing nourishment for their families and communities, and they are often at the forefront of this ever-changing global industry. These 15 women are stellar in their food industry roles as farmers, chefs, food activists, food storytellers, and food
