important coal export industry Away from its industrial importance the area was also a hotbed of military recruitment In common with the rest of the northeast Tynemouth had large numbers of young men who were serving in the forces before the outbreak of the war Its record for wartime recruitment was second to none and it lay in a key recruitment area for the local regiment the Northumberland Fusiliers who raised over fifty battalions during the war a record Given its location on the coast Tynemouth also had a proud tradition of service in the Merchant Navy and many Tynemouth men had the sea in their blood whilst North Shields was the home base of a large and active fishing fleet Many of the men who manned the trawlers saw active service whilst others were exposed to even greater dangers due to the war This engaging book is the first to look at the fascinating social history of Tynemouth during the shattering years of the Great War and charts the huge sacrifices made by the townspeople
