

Seizure

A seizure is neurological disorder which may cause brief episodic unconsciousness and convulsions, during which the body shakes uncontrollably due to abnormal electrical activity in the brain. Seizure disorder results in alteration of limb movements, behaviour, awareness, sensations.

In an otherwise healthy brain, neurons for signaling (which involves electrical activity) occur at different times. A seizure episode occurs when many neurons fire all at once. Apart from falls, leading to bodily damages, recurrence of seizures may also impair the intelligence. A neurologist can treat seizure through pharmacological aids or surgical means.
