Judaism and the Visual Image Melissa Raphael, 2009-02-19 The widespread assumption that Jewish religious tradition is mediated through words not pictures has left Jewish art with no significant role to play in Jewish theology and ethics Judaism and the Visual Image argues for a Jewish theology of image that among other things helps us re read the creation story in Genesis 1 and to question why images of Jewish women as religious subjects appear to be doubly suppressed by the Second Commandment when images of observant male Jews have become legitimate even iconic representations of Jewish holiness Raphael further suggests that devout beholding of images of the Holocaust is a corrective to post Holocaust theologies of divine absence from suffering that are infused by a sub theological aesthetic of the sublime Raphael concludes by proposing that the relationship between God and Israel composes itself into a unitary dance or moving image by which each generation participates in a processive revelation that is itself the ultimate work of Jewish art statuette newly identified as representing the Alexandrian god Hermanubis and an etching by Félix Bracquemond commissioned by the Parisian gallery Arnold Tripp Reinventing Jewish Art in the Age of Multiple Modernities Lola Kantor-Kazovsky, 2022-12-05 Can studying an artist's migration enable the reconfiguration of art history in a new and global mode Michail Grobman's odyssey in search of a contemporary idiom of Jewish art led him to cross the borders of political blocs and to observe, absorb, and confront different patterns of modernism in his work His provocative art, his rich archives and collections, his essays and personal diaries all reveal this complexity and open up a new perspective on post-World War II twentieth-century modernism and on the interconnected functioning of its local models Looking Through Images Emmanuel Alloa, 2021-10-05 Images have always stirred ambivalent reactions Yet whether eliciting fascinated gazes or iconoclastic repulsion from their beholders, they have hardly ever been seen as true sources of knowledge They were long viewed as mere appearances, placeholders for the things themselves or deceptive illusions Today the traditional critique of the spectacle has given way to an unconditional embrace of the visual However, we still lack a persuasive theoretical account of how images work Emmanuel Alloa retraces the history of Western attitudes toward the visual to propose a major rethinking of images as irreplaceable agents of our everyday engagement with the world He examines how ideas of images and their powers have been constructed in Western humanities, art theory, and philosophy, developing a novel genealogy of both visual studies and the concept of the medium Alloa reconstructs the earliest Western media theory Aristotle's concept of the diaphanous milieu of vision and the significance of its subsequent erasure in the history of science Ultimately, he argues for a historically informed phenomenology of images and visual media that explains why images are not simply referential depictions, windows onto the world Instead, images constantly reactivate the power of appearing As media of visualization, they allow things to appear that could not be visible except in and through these very material devices Fierce Poise Alexander Nemerov, 2022-03-22 A National Book Critics Circle finalist One of Vogue's Best Books of the Year A dazzling biography of one of the twentieth century's most respected painters, Helen Frankenthaler, as she came of age as an artist in postwar New York The magic of Alexander Nemerov's portrait of Helen Frankenthaler in Fierce Poise is that it reads like one of Helen's paintings His poetic descriptions of her work and his rich insights into the years when Helen made her first artistic breakthroughs are both light and lush, seemingly easy and yet profound His book is an ode to a truly great artist who, some seventy years after this story begins, we are only now beginning to understand Mary Gabriel, author of Ninth Street Women At the dawn of the 1950s, a promising and dedicated young painter named Helen Frankenthaler, fresh out of college, moved back home to New York City to make her name By the decade's end, she had succeeded in establishing herself as an important American artist of the postwar period In the years in between, she made some of the most daring, head-turning paintings of her day and also came into her own as a woman traveling the world, falling in and out of love and engaging in an ongoing artistic education She also experienced anew and left her mark on the city in which she had been raised in privilege as the daughter of a judge even as she left the security of that world to pursue her artistic ambitions Brought to vivid life by acclaimed art historian Alexander Nemerov these defining moments from her first awed encounter with Jackson Pollock's drip paintings to her first solo gallery show to her tumultuous breakup with eminent art critic Clement Greenberg comprise a portrait as bold and distinctive as the painter herself Inspired by Pollock and the other male titans of abstract expressionism but committed to charting her own course Frankenthaler was an artist whose talent was matched only by her unapologetic determination to distinguish herself in a man's world Fierce Poise is an exhilarating ride through New York's 1950s art scene and a brilliant portrait of a young artist through the moments that shaped her

The New Monuments and the End of Man Robert Slifkin, 2019-11-05 How leading American artists reflected on the fate of humanity in the nuclear era through monumental sculpture In the wake of the atomic bombings of Japan in 1945 artists in the United States began to question what it meant to create a work of art in a world where humanity could be rendered extinct by its own hand The New Monuments and the End of Man examines how some of the most important artists of postwar America revived the neglected tradition of the sculptural monument as a way to grapple with the cultural and existential anxieties surrounding the threat of nuclear annihilation Robert Slifkin looks at such iconic works as the industrially evocative welded steel sculptures of David Smith the austere structures of Donald Judd and the desolate yet picturesque earthworks of Robert Smithson Transforming how we understand this crucial moment in American art he traces the intersections of postwar sculptural practice with cybernetic theory science fiction cinema and literature and the political debates surrounding nuclear warfare Slifkin identifies previously unrecognized affinities of the sculpture of the 1940s and 1950s with the minimalism and land art of the 1960s and 1970s and acknowledges the important contributions of postwar artists who have been marginalized until now such as Raoul Hague Peter Grippe and Robert Mallery Strikingly illustrated throughout The New Monuments and the End of Man spans the decades from Hiroshima to the Fall of Saigon when the atomic bomb cast its shadow over American art

Imaginatio et Ratio: A Journal of Theology and the Arts, Volume 4, 2015 Jeff Sellars, 2015-11-16 Imaginatio et Ratio www.imaginatioetratio.org is a peer reviewed journal primarily focusing on the intersection between the arts and theology hoping to allow imagination and reason to be seen as intimately intertwined as different expressions of the same divine truth Imaginatio et Ratio was started in the hopes that it could serve a growing community of artists and thinkers and strives to present accessible but high quality art literary fiction creative non fiction and theology philosophy as well as interviews and book film art and music reviews The journal is published twice a year and is available in print and digital formats

A Hunger for Aesthetics Michael Kelly, 2012-05-15 For decades aesthetics has been subjected to a variety of critiques often concerning its treatment of beauty or the autonomy of art Collectively these complaints have generated an anti aesthetic stance prevalent in the contemporary art world Yet if we examine the motivations for these critiques Michael Kelly argues we find theorists and artists hungering for a new kind of aesthetics one better calibrated to contemporary art and its moral and political demands Following an analysis of the work of Stanley Cavell Arthur Danto Umberto Eco Susan Sontag and other philosophers of the 1960s who made aesthetics more responsive to contemporary art Kelly considers Sontag s aesthetics in greater detail In On Photography 1977 she argues that a photograph of a person who is suffering only aestheticizes the suffering for the viewer s pleasure yet she insists in Regarding the Pain of Others 2003 that such a photograph can have a sustainable moral political effect precisely because of its aesthetics Kelly considers this dramatic change to be symptomatic of a cultural shift in our understanding of aesthetics ethics and politics He discusses these issues in connection with Gerhard Richter s and Doris Salcedo s art chosen because it is often identified with the anti aesthetic even though it is clearly aesthetic Focusing first on Richter s Baader Meinhof series Kelly concludes with Salcedo s enactments of suffering caused by social injustice Throughout A Hunger for Aesthetics he reveals the place of critique in contemporary art which if we understand aesthetics as critique confirms that it is integral to art Meeting the demand for aesthetics voiced by many who participate in art Kelly advocates for a critical aesthetics that confirms the power of art Abstract Expressionism Joan M. Marter,2007 A collection of essays that discuss abstract expressionist art Doubt Richard Shiff,2012-04-23 In an age where art history s questions are now expected to receive answers Richard Shiff presents a challenging alternative embracing doubt as a critical tool and asking how particular histories of art have come to be
