The Reclamation of Disturbed Arid Lands, 1978 Reclamation of Disturbed Arid Lands Maximizing Effectiveness to Ensure Mission Sustainability, 2000 Much of US Department of Defense training and testing areas is on arid and semiarid land Testing and training activities are often more devastating to arid lands than more mesic areas and consequently can threaten the continuation of military testing and training operations in these areas Under current technology it is estimated that up to 35% of revegetation projects in arid areas will fail Current gaps exist in distinguishing among various degrees of sustainable and nonsustainable impacts from earth disturbing activities in desert ecosystems Research is also needed to determine how to optimize reclamation efforts to ensure sustainability on training lands This project included the establishment of reclamation study plots representing three levels of disturbance ranging from moderate to very heavily disturbed sites Several new and cost effective techniques for revegetation of disturbed training lands are being examined at Fort Irwin the National Training Center in the Mojave Desert of California Major treatments include novel irrigation designs amendments to enhance soil microbes and nutrient cycling soil stabilization decompaction of soils and use of adapted species These treatments at Fort Irwin are being examined at 13 locations that have different soil conditions Results of the first year of these trials will be presented The Reconstruction Of Disturbed Arid Lands Edith B. Allen, 2019-07-11 This volume emphasizes application of the basic ecological relationships among plants animals microorganisms the physical environment and man to reconstruct wildland ecosystems It contains the proceedings of a symposium sponsored by the American Association for the Advancement of Science Developments and Applications of Geomorphology J. E. Costa, P. J. Fleisher, 2012-12-06 The last decade has seen a remarkable increase in the application of geomorphology for numerous projects and investigations Geomorphology is now viewed as an indispensable partner of engineering and geology in the world of applied science For a discipline with few independent theories of its own geomorphology has become a cosmopolitan science drawing on many topics from allied sciences To compile a list of successful and viable applications and contributions would be an arduous chore if not an impossible task Instead we have compiled a set of invited papers that represent some of the practical developments and uses of geomorphology over the past decade Such a compilation of papers will reflect our own backgrounds biases associations and personal and professional experiences We make no apologies for the topics omitted but recognize that this volume could be prohibitively large if all the subdivisions of geomorphology were equally and fully covered Our goal in assembling the papers for this volume was to emphasize the concepts principles and applications of geomorphology While techniques procedures and practical applications are stressed the reason for each investigation is as important as the method employed This book therefore represents the methods used and reasons for applying geomorphology Where case studies are used they serve as examples that can be applied in related situations similar settings and other locations The authors have successfully addressed this
