

HOW RED WINE IS MADE

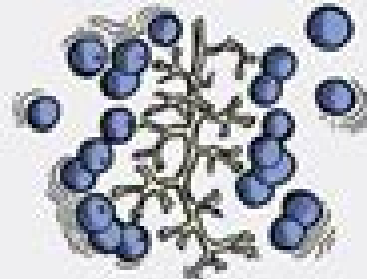

The easiest way to learn how to make wine at home

Harvest grapes

The vintage (harvest) period is the best time to harvest grapes. It's during this time that the grapes are at their peak. The weather is warm and dry, and the grapes are ripe and ready to be harvested.

Prepare grapes

Grapes are washed and then crushed. The juice is then separated from the skins and seeds. The juice is then fermented in a barrel or bottle.

Clarification

Clarification is the process of removing any remaining solids from the wine. This is done by adding a small amount of a clarifying agent, such as bentonite or egg whites.

Press

After the fermentation process, the wine is pressed. This is done by using a press to squeeze the juice out of the grapes. The juice is then separated from the skins and seeds.

Fermentation

The wine is then fermented in a barrel or bottle. This is done by adding a small amount of yeast to the juice. The yeast will then ferment the juice, creating alcohol and carbon dioxide.

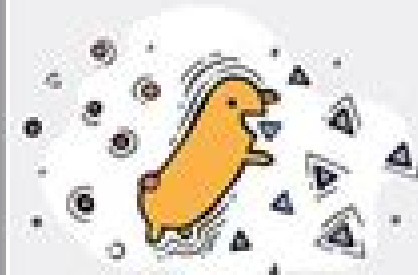

Add yeast

Yeast is added to the wine to start the fermentation process. This is done by adding a small amount of yeast to the juice. The yeast will then ferment the juice, creating alcohol and carbon dioxide.

Bottling

Bottling is the final step in the wine-making process. This is done by pouring the wine into bottles. The bottles are then sealed and stored in a cool, dark place.

Malolactic

Malolactic fermentation is a process that occurs in some wines. It is the conversion of malic acid into lactic acid. This process is often used to soften the wine and add a creamy texture.

Aging

Wine is often aged in barrels or bottles. This is done to allow the wine to develop a more complex flavor. The longer the wine is aged, the more complex the flavor will be.

Blending

Blending is the process of combining different wines to create a new wine. This is done by pouring different wines into a single barrel or bottle. The resulting wine will have a unique flavor that is a combination of the individual wines.

Bottle aging

Bottle aging is the process of allowing wine to mature in the bottle. This is done to allow the wine to develop a more complex flavor. The longer the wine is aged in the bottle, the more complex the flavor will be.
