

Assignment of natural-resource revenue to subnational government

Arguments against sub-national assignments (all natural resource revenues)

- Inefficiency in geographical allocation of factors of production
 - location of firms in oil producing areas with no comparative advantage;
- Inefficient spending due to limited absorption capacity
 - More resources than needed in Arauca (Colombia); Cajamarca (Peru)
- Possibilities of sub-national corruption;
- Volatility in prices: sub-national governments generally less able to absorb.

Natural Resource Revenues A Test Of Federalism:

Natural Resource Revenues Anthony Scott, 1976 Debate on the question of who should receive the surplus revenue generated by natural resource exploitation Ottawa or the provinces is usually carried on in terms of history politics custom law social values and environmental considerations This collection of essays presents analyses of the question from the economist's point of view The essays fall into three groups In the first of these the authors examine the taxation of the mining and energy industries and show how the method of taxation chosen by different levels of government federal or provincial may be non neutral distorting private output and timing decisions The second group consists of careful case studies of the effects of particular natural resource taxation measures the third focuses directly on the question of provincial and federal entitlement to resource revenues Although arguments are advanced for linking the right to tax to the responsibility for management and control at present vested in the provinces most of the contributors would agree that the provinces should be regarded as stewards and bailiffs not landlords as rent collectors and managers not rentiers and owners
