about their country's first Antarctic expedition 1819-21 over the past 200 years. It considers the effects their discussions have had on Russia's Antarctic policy and may yet have on Antarctica itself. In particular, it examines the Soviet decision in 1949 in line with the cultural policies of late Stalinism to revise the traditional view of the expedition in order to claim that it was Russian seamen that first sighted the Antarctic mainland in January 1820; this claim remains the official position in Russia today. The author illustrates, however, that the case for such a claim has never been established and that attempts to make it damaged the work of successive Russian historians. Providing a timely assessment of Russian historiography of the Bellingshausen expedition and examining the connections between the priority claim and national policy goals, this book represents an important contribution to the history of the Antarctic. Embedding Agricultural Commodities Willem van Schendel, 2016-06-17 Over the past 500 years, westerners have turned into avid consumers of colonial products and various production systems in the Americas, Africa, and Asia have adapted to serve the new markets that opened up in the wake of the European encounter. The effects of these transformations for the long-term development of these societies are fiercely contested. How can we use historical source material to pinpoint this social change? This volume presents six different examples from countries in which commodities were embedded in existing production systems: tobacco, coffee, sugar, and indigo in Indonesia; India; and Cuba, to shed light on this key process in human history. To demonstrate the effectiveness of using different types of source material, each contributor presents a micro study based on a different type of historical source: a diary, a petition, a mail report, a review, a scientific study, and a survey. As a result, the volume offers insights into how historians use their source material to construct narratives about the past and offers introductions to trajectories of agricultural commodity production as well as much new information about the social struggles surrounding them. Hand Surgery in Asia and Europe, An Issue of Hand Clinics Jin Bo Tang, Grey Giddins, 2017-07-14 Guest editors Jin Bo Tang and Grey Giddins have assembled an expert team of authors on the topic of Hand Surgery in Asia and Europe.
